Many Junior Holstein Members Honored At Convention

UNIONTOWN (Fayette Co.) — The Junior Holstein Convention was held last weekend, and along with a great time to learn more about the Holstein cow and socializing with friends, members were recognized and rewarded for their accomplishments through the year.

For example, the Distinguished Junior Member awards were given. The four finalists each completed a scrapbook listing their accomplishments in Holstein activities, school work, community involvement, leadership and their ideas of the future in agriculture and the Holstein industry.

Each finalist was also interviewed by a panel of judges, who then combined their scrapbook achievements and interview scores to select two winners.

The finalists named were Vicki Ansell, Scottsdale, Westmoreland County; Chris Connelly, PA Furnace, Centre County; Jonathan McMurray, Eighty Four, Washington County; and Jason Ruffaner, Worthington, Armstrong County.

The winners are Christopher Connelly, son of Ronald and Denise Connelly and Jason Ruffaner, son of Ronald and Beth Ruffaner. These two outstanding young people will represent Pennsylvania in the National Distinguished Junior Member Contest to be held in June at the National Holstein Convention in Louisville, Kentucky. Each of the winners as well as all the finalists are to be congratulated on a job well done.

INTERMEDIATE DIVISION

In the intermediate division there were six finalists. They were chosen from a field of 12, completed scrapbooks listing their accomplishments in Holstein activities, school work, community involvement and leadership positions. They were also interviewed by a panel of judges who discussed with them the future of agriculture and the Holstein breed.

The senior division distinguished junior member winners at the Junior Convention of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association held last week in Uniontown are, seated, Jason Ruffaner and Christopher Connelly. Finalists also included are, standing, Vicki Ansell and Jonathan McMurray.

Milk Price Reform May Improve Farmer Pay, Not Understanding

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — A recent proposal by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman may make milk pricing more equitable and fair, though the new system may be even harder to understand.

Robert Yonkers, Penn State University professor of agricultural economics and rural sociology, has been a featured speaker at a number of agricultural seminars this meeting season, and during a recent talk, he was able to provide a preliminary overview of the just released proposal by Secretary Glickman.

Dr. Yonkers reported on the dairy situation and outlook, discussing some of the initial summary explanations from the U.S. Department of Agriculture on Secretary Glickman's proposal for reducing federal milk marketing

Lititz Man Receives Honorary Young Farmer Award

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — A Lititz man accepted an honorary award at the 38th annual Pennsylvania Young Farmer Convention last week at the Ramada Inn on Atherton Street in State College. Forney Longenecker received the award for being active in the organization since its inception in 1955.

Longenecker has held most, if not all, offices at the local and state levels and was instrumental in starting the national organization. He pioneered the first 12-page state newspaper for the organization. He has attended nearly all of the Manheim Young Farmer meetings for the past 35 years. His interest in the organization stems from its purpose to educate and promote environmentally appropriate production, marketing and processing of food and fiber.

"We learn from each other through this organization. It promotes leadership. Farmers are so independent. It gives them a chance to make friends too."

The association recognized several others at the banquet. Dale Herr, Jr., of Kirkwood received

At Pork Expo, Attorney Shows Farmers Ways To Control Nuisance Lawsuits

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Greg Andrews has seen his share of nuisance lawsuits.

Andrews, an attorney from Grimes, Iowa, remembered one lawsuit that involved a farm operator who used a dirt lane to transport a manure spreader to several fields.

The plaintiff argued that "dust" kicked up by the spreader's wheels damaged rows of sweet corn. The defendant lost the case — to the tune of $40,000.

The plaintiff was a guy who wanted to "settle disputes in litigation," Andrews noted. As for suspected "kooks" who will claim any kind of damage from swine farms at any given time, Andrews said, "you should take them seriously."

Andrews spoke to swine producers and agri-industry representatives Wednesday morning during the seminar portion of the 20th annual Keystone Pork Expo at the Lebanon Valley Expo Center at the Lebanon Fairgrounds.

Andrews represents clients and coordinates the Pork Producers Environmental Law Education Network, a project funded by the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC). He has spent the past three years studying environmental nuisance-type lawsuits and "learning a new vocabulary," he said, regarding the swine business. In that time he has seen how the NPPC has promoted efforts to improve swine environmental quality and to provide information to assist in environmental quality in pork operations.

Since that time, Andrews thought the problem of environmental nuisance lawsuits would die down. In some places, it has.

EASTERN REGION FROZEN EGGS, FEBRUARY 06, 1998. FEDERAL-STATE

Prices were lower. The market tone was weak. Demand was very light to fair, mostly light. Plants focused on filling previously committed orders. Supplies were adequate. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending January 31, 1998 were 1% more than last week, and 4% greater than the same week last year. Raw material offerings increased and prices dropped dramatically as breaking plants showed limited interest to purchase additional supplies.

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids declined at the close today, with wheat slightly lower, corn and soybean bids sharply lower. Wheat 1 to 6 cents lower. Corn 2 to 6 cents lower. Sorghum 9 to 10 cents lower. Soybeans 9 to 18 cents lower. Wheat bids slid lower in sympathy with lower corn and bean bids, despite pretty good export sale announcements. Corn and soybean bids fell sharply lower in reaction to USDA's drop in the 1997-98 export estimate by 125 million bushels and a significant jump in the Argentine crop estimate. Continued lack of export sales this week was also a pressure factor for corn and soybean bids.

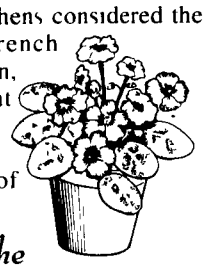
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

FEBRUARY 16-22, 1998

PRESIDENTS DAY, FEB. 16.

FAITHFUL IN FEBRUARY

February's flower, the violet, is a symbol of faithfulness, modesty, and simplicity Used medicinally over the centuries as a mouthwash and for congestive pulmonary conditions, sweet violet (Viola odorata) is both an expectorant and a diuretic Folklore lists it among the powerful forces against evil, which is perhaps why the Greek city of Athens considered the violet its token flower The French came to associate it with Napoleon, because of the violet's persistent return in the spring. For years after 1814, the French government banned any symbolic use of the flower for just that reason



What is charm? It is what the violet has and the camellia has not.

– Francis Marion Crawford

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ To minimize fat at fast-food restaurants, choose the grilled chicken sandwiches over the beef.

MARLBOROUGH PUDDING

- 3/4 cup unsweetened applesauce
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 3/4 cup white wine or grape juice
- 6 tablespoons melted butter
- 4 eggs, beaten well
- juice and grated rind of 1 lemon
- 1 cup milk
- 1/2 teaspoon grated nutmeg

Combine applesauce, sugar, wine, and melted butter Stir in eggs, lemon juice, rind, and milk. Pour into buttered 1-quart baking dish, grate nutmeg over pudding, and bake at 350° F until firm Serve warm with maple syrup

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

OPINION

Thanks For Helping

We came across this little piece on the Internet about the ten commandments for farm wives that may make you smile. Evidently someone who subscribes to Dairy-L had them hanging on the kitchen wall. They are:

- Thou shalt not sort cattle with your hands in your pockets (husbands and cows don't like that.)
- Thou shalt cook meals which can be served thirty minutes early or two hours late.
- Thou shalt learn to keep farm records...(when did we turn out that bull?).
- Thou shalt love the smell of new mown hay, freshly plowed earth, sweet smelling silage, and ammonia in the barn.
- Thou shalt be inspired to see the sun rise and relieved to see it set.
- Thou shalt learn to open gates, close gates, and guard gates.
- Thou shalt thrill at the birth of a new calf and at the sight of a new tractor.
- Thou shalt live closer to God with faith to exceed many city dwellers.
- Thou shalt cherish meals together, long nights for the vet to arrive, and decisions of plowing up the winter wheat.
- Thou shalt be exalted at the brotherly hand on your shoulder, the tender kiss on your forehead, and those three precious words "Thanks for helping!"

Maybe in no other business is the husband/wife team more important. In fact, if the whole family is pulling together, the success of the farming operation is more secure. We think in the above list, the words "Thanks for helping" should not be considered commandments but rather come from spontaneous appreciation for all; each family member contributes to the family farm. Happy Valentine's Day everyone!

Now Is The Time

To Prepare Cows for Calving

How well a cow does in her lactation depends greatly upon the care she receives in the weeks preceding calving, according to Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension Dairy Agent. Preparation for calving and a new lactation begins not a few days before calving, but months before calving

Proper nutrition is very important for a healthy, vigorous calf, good milk production, good conception rates and for the long term health of the cow.

The dry period is a good time to do corrective foot trimming and to administer necessary vaccinations for such things as IBR, PI-3, BVD and BRSV. Other vaccines that may be necessary are a 5 strain lepto vaccine and J-5 vaccine for coliform mastitis.

Consult your veterinarian for specific recommendations. Continue to protect dry cows from infections and injuries by housing or confining them in clean, dry and comfortable areas.

To Feed Dry Cows Properly

When profit margins are tight and good quality forages are scarce and expensive, it may be tempting to skimp on the feeding of dry cows and heifers Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension Dairy Agent, reminds us, that could be a big mistake that you will pay dearly in the months that lie ahead

Test your forages and TMRs and work closely with a trained nutritionist to make sure your rations are properly balanced This is important for building up the cow's energy and nutrient reserves prior to calving.

Aim to have cows dry off with a uniform body condition score of approximately 3.5. Feed them a bulky, good quality forage based ration. Supplement it with a few pounds of a dry cow grain mix with the necessary vitamins and minerals. Two to three weeks before calving, start adding a few pounds of the lactating ration to the dry cow mix.

To Look Up - Power Lines Are Hot

Coming in contact with overhead power lines can be deadly. Today's farm machinery is bigger and taller, making the danger of working around electric lines greater than ever. Remember, utility lines are uninsulated.

Do not let your body become a direct link to the ground or the result can be fatal. Know the clearance height of all farm equipment. To be safe, keep all objects at least 10 feet away from overhead lines.

Never attempt to raise or move a power line. If you are operating a piece of equipment that touches a line, stay where you are and have someone call the utility company. If you must leave the equipment that is touching the line, jump as far as you can so that no part of your body touches the equipment and the ground at the same time.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "You cannot put a price tag on love, but you can on all its accessories."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHAT TO DO WHILE WAITING
February 15, 1998

Background Scripture:
II Peter 3
Devotional Reading:
Jeremiah 17:5-10

Fifty years ago I read a book by the late Methodist Bishop Gerald Kennedy that was to have a profound affect upon my life and faith, both then and now. The name of the book was The Lion and The Lamb: Paradoxes of the Christian Faaith (Abingdon-Cokesbury, 1950).

Actually, it saved my faith because it introduced me to the paradoxical nature of the Christian faith, for me a brand new idea. A paradox is the holding together in creative tension of two ideas which seem quite contradictory. Before reading this book, I was struggling with some of the more obvious contradictions in the Christian teachings. Despite the creeds and doctrines, I was finding that lots of Christian teachings did not fit together nicely. Addicted to logic, I thought contradiction was indicative of error.

Then I read Kennedy's book and I was impressed that, instead of denying the contradictory nature of some Christian teachings, he acknowledged it. In fact, he exalted it, presenting paradox as an asset to belief, rather than a liability. For life itself is paradoxical, full of seeming contradictions. "Christianity dares to go beyond logic," Kennedy wrote, "because life does . . . It is not afraid to state its truth in paradoxes, because life does."

APOCALYPTIC

In my mind — and I doubt that I am alone in this — there is no Christian teaching more seemingly contradictory and paradoxical than the apocalyptic writings we find in the Bible, particularly in the Book of Revelation, I Thessalonians 4:13 to 5:2, Jude v. 9, Mark 13, and II Peter. Apocalyptic literature was a specialized type that arose in the Near East in about 150 BC and flourished for another 300 to 400 years. Some scholars believe the Jews were introduced to the apocalyptic during their exile in Persia.

It is a style of thinking and writing that focused on cosmic dualism (the universal forces of good vs. evil), superhuman beings (angels and demons), dream-like visions, the destruction of the world, a heavy code-like dependence upon symbols, and a pessimistic, fatalistic view of the present age. If you read II Peter 3, you get a glimpse of this apocalyptic concept. The writer is certain that the present age could not be redeemed or improved and therefore it must be brought to a calamitous end by divine intervention.

Now, the paradoxical aspect of the apocalyptic is that it appears to be quite contrary to the teachings of Jesus concerning the kingdom of God. These teachings, by contrast, seem optimistic or hopeful of what God can accomplish in the world. God has not given the earth up to Satan and the kingdom will come as we open ourselves up to it. Some Christians base their faith on the apocalyptic, while others base theirs on the kingdom of God.

CREATIVE TENSION

This is for me another Christian paradox. The ultimate truth is to be found in neither polarity, but in the creative tension between these two truths that to the limitation of human knowledge appear to be contradictory. There is value in both concepts, even if we don't know how to fit them together in one complete and harmonious picture.

So, whether you believe Jesus will return to destroy the world or look to his return in glory with the fulfillment of the kingdom, II Peter 3 has some good advice for all of us. Whether you believe that Jesus will come at the end of time or that his second coming is something we experience after we leave this earthly life, we can appreciate that what appears to be God's delay is merely the difference between time in God's sight and our own (3:8). Furthermore, "The Lord is . . . forbearing toward you, not wishing that any should perish, that all should reach repentance" (3:9).

In the meantime, we are not to spend our time speculating on when and how the kingdom will come. This is in God's hands and "the day of the Lord will come like a thief. . ." (3:10). Regardless how we view the destiny of the world, we can all "live lives of holiness and godliness" (3:11). We do not just impatiently "tread water" until that day. Instead, while we wait, we are to "grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

At Pork Expo, Attorney Shows Farmers Ways To Control Nuisance Lawsuits

But every day, new cases pop up. And in Pennsylvania, "you're at the height of it," he told producers.

In Iowa, lawsuits have reached a peak, Andrews believes. Perhaps, he thinks, the litigation proceedings will begin to die away.

Andrews related several cases of how producers fared in court against lawsuits:

• In Iowa, a hog producer constructed an earthen waste storage basin a little more than half a mile from a neighbor. The plaintiff argued that when the winds blew from the south in the summer, the "terrible" odor was overwhelming. The defendant believed that the half-mile distance was enough to keep odor problems at bay. He went on the defense using the state's right to farm law. However, before the farm was approved as part of a protected agricultural area, the producer began filling the basin with manure — and lost the case. The producer was forced to shut down, make alterations to the facility, and pay $45,000 in damages. The producer appealed the case to the state supreme court. The court sustained the ruling and added another layer to the defendant's misery — the "devaluation" on the plaintiff's property as a result of the odor wasn't taken into account. The defendant had to pay $56,000 in actual damages. For the defendant, "it was a bad deal all around," said Andrews. Fortunately, the state pork producers chipped in and paid for some of the damages.

• In Missouri, one producer operated a 600-head finishing barn. An odor nuisance was filed, but the defendant won. How? There are 20,000 pigs in a two-mile radius of the defendant's operation — clearly it was "pig country," home for a lot of pigs, and the plaintiff should have known that. It was an inherent "right to farm" area.

• Iowa State University was successfully sued over a manure storage structure at the district court level, according to Andrews. They were forced to pay $2,000 a day to the plaintiffs, made to cover the structure, forced to use manure injection, and other restrictions were imposed. The university decided not to appeal it because of the high profile of the case.

• In Iowa, a producer was filed suit over allegedly placing manure in a field that was supposedly

"flowing" into a neighbor's well. The woman who filed the lawsuit was seeking damages. However, during the course of the trial, it was discovered the well was abandoned and the woman was not living in the house supposedly served by the well — she lived in a trailer some distance away. The defendant won.

• An Indiana producer who was the subject of a lawsuit and won the case wrote a 16-page letter to Andrews, describing the "emotional toll" the case exacted on him and his family. The defendant found out that the neighbors he thought would support him appeared not as reliable as he supposed. Neighborhood kids got in fights over the lawsuit. The producer asked Andrews the question: Why is there no "objective standard" for odor in the country? "It doesn't exist at this point," said Andrews.

Iowa has some building restrictions, including a 1,250-foot setback from residential property for manure storage. Colorado is considering a law to make the setback one mile. Right now, several states have a minimum setback of ¼ of a mile.

Despite all this, "pork production is happening," and it's not the end of the world for producers, Andrews noted.

But Andrews cautioned that no amount of public relation work on the part of the producer, right to farm acts, or coverups will protect producers in lawsuits if that producer does not farm in an "environmentally friendly" manner. "You have to become an environmentalist when it comes to your farm," he said.

Still, Andrews recommends that, by following a manure plan and learning the latest techniques in odor control, there is some protection. He also offers the following advice as a manner to legal defense in the event of a lawsuit:

• Practice good public relations. "You need to be open and honest about what you're doing in the operation," said Andrews. Don't hide your farming. Notify neighbors when spreading manure. Seek their advice. "Give the neighbors a chance to have some say in your operations," Andrews said. "Give them some benefit of control." If they complain, "respond to the complaints thoughtfully, courteously, and soon," he noted.

• Foster goodwill. Offer tours of new sites. Sometimes, Andrews believes, neighbors have nothing but a bad impression of what you do. They think you're pumping the waste right into the groundwater. In one North Carolina facility, a delegation of 6-8 neighbors regularly inspect a large swine operation to make sure it remains environmentally friendly.

• Give away food. Provide hams at Christmastime, have a barbecue, invite the neighbors over. "Give (your neighbor) a feeling that he is benefiting from that farm," Andrews said.

• Be creative. There are "tons of things you can do," said Andrews. He said that even if it involves offering to put your neighbor's family up in the Super 8 Motel with a swimming pool for three days, it will give the neighbor's kids the impression that "it's the Region II Outstanding Young Adult Farmer Under 30 Award. Herr, his wife Casey and child Katie, farm in partnership with his parents, A. Dale and Faye Herr. The partnership farms 340 acres of corn, alfalfa, wheat, barley, soybeans and tobacco. They contour-farm their fields, install diversions and terraces where needed, and no-till all small grains and soybeans, plus some of the corn. Bio-solids or sewage sludge is applied to increase soil fertility and reduce fertilizer costs. Most of the grain crops are forward contracted while the forage crops are sold to local farmers. Dale oversees all daily operations and maintains all equipment. Dale currently serves as president-elect of the state organization and is active in the Solanco Young Farmers Association.

The Region VII Outstanding Young Adult Farmer Under 30 Award went to Jerry and Edna Musser from Newmanstown. Jerry has been dairy farming in partnership with his father for the past three years. Jerry and Edna milk their 110-cow herd in a 45-stall barn. Their free-stall barn provides slats and mattresses for cow comfort and savings in labor. With a herd average of 24,000, the Mussers use DHIA with MUN and SCC tests to help plan a balanced TMR. They farm 350 acres of corn, barley alfalfa and soybeans. Jerry and Edna are active in the Cedar Crest Young Farmers Association. They have two children.

Eugene and Kathleen Martin of Lebanon County accepted the Outstanding Young Adult Farmer Over 30 for Region VII. The Martins farm 173 acres and milk 95 cows for a herd average of 23,000 pounds. They use conservation practices to grow corn, alfalfa, rye, barley and soybeans. Maintaining maximum animal comfort with free-stall mattresses and tunnel ventilation is a high priority for the Martins. In addition, the Martins produce 319,000 broilers each year in two broiler houses. Eugene is active in the Cedar Crest Yoiung Farmers Association. The Martins have three children.

Dwayne and Karen Peifer of Lancaster County earned the Outstanding Young Adult Farmer Over 30 Award for Region II. They grow corn and an alfalfa/timothy mix on 320 acres of owned and rented land. They conserve soil with contour strips, pipe outlet terraces, cover crops, and waterways. They milk 140 cows for a herd average of 24,000 pounds. Their TMR consists of mostly home-grown forages. Heifers on the Peifer farm are also fed a TMR for rapid growth allowing many to

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pa. DHIA field staff and technician advisory committee met Jan. 28 at the Residence Inn in State College, and preparing for the upcoming technicians' spring conferences was at the top of the agenda.

Topics to be discussed at the conferences include the all new heifer program, safety committee update and roundtable discussion facilitated by Dean Amick, director of Field Operations and Marketing.

The spring conferences begin on March 20 and conclude on April 8. A total of 11 conferences will be conducted in different parts of the Pa. DHIA service area.

Along with the spring conferences, Pa. DHIA holds the fall and summer conferences to update and educate the technicians on changes in the industry. Quality Certification through National DHIA requires all affiliates to continually update and educate employees.

The workforce at Pa. DHIA is proud to be part of the best DHIA in the country that provides the highest number of usable records to U.S. Department of Agriculture which stands at 83 percent. This is important to dairymen who participate in young sire programs, as well as purebred breeders who rely on merchandising cattle both in the international and domestic markets.

Don't trust your herd management record processing to just anyone. Call Dean Amick at 800-344-8378 today and start reaping the benefits.

Milk Price Reform May Improve Farmer Pay, Not Understanding

orders from 32 down to from 10 to 14, as mandated in the 1996 Farm Bill.

He said that because Secretary Glickman issued the proposal very recently, and because of its volume and depth, he could only speak from information gathered from USDA news releases and a several-page impact analysis available on the USDA's Internet homepage.

Yonkers first backtracked to provide some historical context for the federal order reform, and how the dairy industry has been responding to the phase-out of federally set milk production support prices (set to be eliminated completely in 2000), as well as milk pricing mechanisms.

He noted that until about 1987 to 1990, the federally set milk-support price represented the foundation for the price paid by processors to farmers for milk, and the two prices tracked closely.

Then the President Bush Administration and Congress put into effect deficit reduction freezes on the support price, which allowed the support price to fall below cost of production.

While the growth of milk production curtailed, it didn't stop.

At the same time, immediate demand for some dairy products grew beyond what the needs of population growth and social change would seem to warrant.

According to Yonkers, weather-caused reductions of the world whole milk powder supplies took up surplus milk, and increased the price for milk to United States dairy farmers.

Since then, prices have spiked dramatically and fallen dramatically.

More recently, after recovering from a late 1996 through early 1997 bottoming, prices have been again recovering.

The highest prices paid for milk in many years was during 1996, but by the end of the year the price had fallen by several dollars per hundredweight — devastating when considering that many dairy producers reportedly operate on less than a $2 per hundredweight profit margin.

As a result of the dramatic decline in the milk price and continued instability in the dairy price received at the farm, income-protection (also called risk reduction) tools, such as dairy futures and futures options have been introduced to serve as price insurance for dairy farmers.

Using such tools, dairy producers can now lock-in a price, which serves to buffer either a decline or rise in actual milk price received.

However, Yonkers dealt more specifically with the proposed changes to federal pricing orders.

There are 32 federal orders which have become established over time. Each is somewhat unique, and they have some different rules and mechanisms for establishing milk prices.

They were instituted by the federal government to help keep dairy farmers in existance in order to keep food available for United States citizens.

The dairy production and marketing environment has changed significantly since they were created, though they have still served to set milk price.

Meanwhile and more recently, the dairy industry began extreme national competition between regional producers and companies that resulted in mergers and closings, as well as strategies to control regional milk and dairy supplies with a longer term interest in controlling production and price.

Thus, the consolidated production and processing industries have grown geographically to the point of overlapping several to many different federal milk orders.

This has caused some grief for those who must calculate the milk's value and how to pay producers, as well as those attempting to market the milk.

Furthermore, mega-chain mega-stores have overtaken a large portion of the domestic retail market, and the chains have enjoyed extreme competitiveness among dairy product suppliers to gain shelf space.

The failure of smaller or less efficient groceries and markets to compete with the mega-stores and chains has resulted in a lack of markets for some relatively small dairy suppliers has added to problems for that group of independent processors.

In effect, the actual flow of milk from farm to end user is almost impossible to track on a daily basis.

That's because large collective marketing organizations and private organizations collect more milk than what they need (to ensure year-round adequate supplies) to fulfill competitive contracts, and/or produce their own varieties of dairy product.

The operational surplus is then sold or used in whatever manner brings the highest return, even if much below cost.

Through collective effort to build a national dairy promotion effort, and because variations have decreased greatly, milk is considered a generic product to the greater dairy industry.

It is promoted and marketed as such.

(There are, of course, those who distinguish their milk. They are those who niche market based on superior or unique taste or quality. As well, the cheese industry has been making some distinctions and paying differently because of the differences in milk proteins between some dairy cattle breeds.)

The actual value of the milk to the farmer depends more on through which, and to which, organization the milk is marketed.

Pennsylvania Aquaculture Summit Provides PDA Direction

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A Pennsylvania aquaculture summit called by state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr. was held Thursday at the state Department of Agriculture Building in Harrisburg.

The purpose of the summit was to assess the issues of concern by the industry and to determine possible supportive actions by PDA and other state agencies.

The summit was attended by a group representing some of the growing aquacultural industry in the state.

The last time the industry gathered for such a stakeholder meeting was in 1993, while Boyd Wolff served as agriculture secretary.

The result of that 1993 conference was a draft of issues that have hampered entreprenuerial efforts in aquaculture in Pennsylvania.

On Thursday, the group included many who were involved during the 1993 conference, and apparently many of the issues remain the same and largely unresolved.

Leo Dunn, with the PDA Bureau of Market Development, led the conference.

The meeting began with a review and discussion of eight issues identified and prioritized as matters of concern during 1993.

A general consensus was used to identify areas of concern and assign new priorities, if appropriate.

Secretary Hayes joined the group for about an hour to informally hear concerns. He told the group that aquaculture, its growth and promotion, was very important to the state and that work would be done to help the industry advance.

As with other agricultural ventures, Hayes told the group that first and foremost should be addressing issues that unecessarily reduce or eliminate profits for aquaculturalists.

He also told the group that Dunn has been aggressive in promoting the concerns of the state aquaculture industry at various levels and opportunities.

He said that while, historically, aquaculture wasn't as large an industry as it is now, it is growing and can be pressumed to grow in world importance.

He said that compared to the state's nationally leading agricultural activities, such as dairy and livestock production, that it may seem insignificant to some.

(Dunn said an initial rudimentary survey of the value of Pennsylvania aquaculture resulted in an estimated annual sales of $12.8 million.)

Nevertheless, Hayes said he believes that logically, aquaculture will increase in importance, especially as wild populations of aquatic food species are continually pressured from world commercial overharvesting and loss of habitat.

He said that with the human population growing, and arable land acres decreasing, other techniques for food and material production are going to have to be found.

Therefore, he said, that while aquaculture is important today, it is going to become even more important. He said its importance is not only in food production, but extends to such areas as the health care industry.

He said aquaculture is a virtually untapped production resource. The research needed to unlock that potential has to be supported.

But overall, he said that he knows the issues listed and prioritized were important, but, "If we're not talking about profitability, it's not relevant."

Hayes announced that later this year he plans to hold a symposium on agricultural research, and relevancy will be an issue then, because if the research doesn't enhance profitability "... in some manner, it's not relevant."

Also, in order to better serve the industry, it's necessary for the state to have accurate data about the actual extent and diversity of the state's aquacultural production capabilities.

Previously, official surveys were done and information provided to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS).

Now that surveying aquacultural production has been shifted to the purview of PASS, work is underway to develop better, more specific data collecton and reporting on actual instate production.

A representative from PASS told the group that they should review a proposed list of specific different species for which PASS should seek production data.

He said that PASS does not make specific producer information public or available to other governmental agencies, so producers should not be reluctant to provide information for an official survey.

Instead of fearing providing information, if PASS-gathered data can provide for more accurate information regarding the state's aquacultural industry, then its true strengths and value can be better represented when working to expand knowledge and opportunities for the industry.

The effort to find out what the state can do for the aquacultural industry is part of a wider effort by Hayes to be more aggressive in working with various agricultural production sectors, to improve communications and to provide meaningful support by the PDA through promotion or other means, such as research, testing, etc.

Strong efforts have been made in expanding exporting opportunities for Pennsylvania agricultural commodities and processed products, and the aquacultural industry has been becoming more active in more recent years.

The Pennsylvania Aquaculture Association for more than several years has maintained a promotion booth at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Food Court, selling catfish, tilapia, trout and striped bass.

As an aside, the PAA also provided an aquarium for promotional use during the Farm Show. It was used this year, and after the Farm Show, it was moved to the lobby of the PDA Building in Harrisburg.

According to Dunn, it has been suggested that the aquarium can serve as home, on a rotating basis, for different species raised by Pennsylvania aquaculturalists. While it currently is housing goldfish and koi, it could, he said serve as a showcase for several months at a time for different species raised in Pennsylvania.

He said that information about the species, its importance and uses could accompany the aquarium and serve to educate the public visiting the PDA Building.

Those invited to attend the aquaculture summit included owners of licensed facilities, those who could potentially serve on a state aquacultural advisory board, related state agency representatives and interested legislators, as well as representatives of Penn State University, University of Pennsylvania, and University of Delaware, among others.

While the majority of those participating represented fish-raising businesses, there was some representation of aquatic plant producers.

Leading the concerns of the group in 1993 was bird and animal predation of fish at the facilities.

That continues.

Bird predation has long been a problem and has cost the industry much in lost production.

While it was common practice years ago for birds, such as herons, that had become habitual predators at fish-raising facilities to be shot. Federal protections and fines had largely stopped that practice since.

However, according to audience testimony, while the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has and does issue permits for killing troublesome birds, the state Game Commission has to co-sign on the permit in order to grant complete authority to kill certain bird species.

The group complained that, while the rest of the agricultural sector is allowed to kill crop damaging animals such as deer (protected by the Game Commission through hunting rules and regulations), the aquaculture industry has been prevented from doing so, primarily because neither the federal government, nor the state, specifically recognizes aquaculture as an agricultural practice.

It was reported that the Game Commission, which didn't have a representative present and couldn't be contacted for comment prior to presstime, has ruled that because aquaculture isn't included in the official state definition of agriculture, it isn't afforded the same right to destroy crop-damaging animals.

Further, previously proposed legislation to define aquaculture as a branch of agriculture and help develop the industry stalled and had to be reintroduced.

More recently proposed legislation (Senate Bill 283) would bring legal and state policy consideration of aquaculture as agriculture. Successful passage of that legislation, or something similar, is sought by the group.

Without it, those in aquaculture are forced to pay some taxes not required by traditional agriculture, are not afforded work vehicle consideration by PennDOT, and they do not receive the same promotional support as other sectors.

Of second priority was the availability of drugs and therapeutants for the industry.

For example, while some medicines are available to those raising trout and salmon species, labeling was not done for warm water fishes, such as hybrid striped bass.

While those raising trout can purchase and use some drugs over the counter, those raising other species must secure a prescription from a veterinarian in order to use the same drug. That adds considerably to operating costs and decreases profitability.

Further, disease testing support needs to be determined, and expanded if possible, to help the industry.

The state should also develop a fish health certification program so that Pennsylvania aquacultural producers can better meet growing demands for health certification by other states and nations.

It was reported that while diagnostic services by the state laboratory are good, but should be expanded, that once a disease or health problem has been discovered through diagnostic testing, there is no bank of expertise to provide growers with solution advice.

Veterinary support for the industry is very limited, and some in south central Pennsylvania are forced to use out-of-state services.

The Fish Commission was invited to be represented, though it was not. The Commission in the past had offered disease testing services to the rest of the state's aquaculture industry, as did the federal Fish and Wildlife agency. They both stopped that practice three years ago.

Without time to adjust to the lack of testing facilities and expertise, it became difficult for private business to market fish out of state.

At the time, New York's similar trout production was devastated prior to its April opening of trout season because whirling disease — a disease affecting the brains of fish.

New York had banned accepting fish in its borders unless assured that they were tested and certified as being free of whirling disease.

In quick response, the state PDA diagnostic laboratory staff, especially Dr. Fred Rommel, developed and got approved a test for whirling disease. That enabled Pennsylvania producers to be able to certify the disease-free status of fish stocks and then qualify to sell and ship trout to New York in time for its trout season opening day.

In the meantime, however, support of the aquaculture industry by PDA was dampened.

The industry had manned a 12-member PDA aquacultural advisory board, though the board was dismantled under former state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius, whom Hayes replaced.

Additional development of tests to help the aquacultural industry comply with growing health-certification restrictions was not done.

Water quality issues remained next in importance, in comparison to 1993 priorities.

While the 1993 effort and followup determined that a general permit should and could be developed to allow aquacultural facilities to discharge used water into the state's waterways.

While much of the work in developing the general permit has been done through effort with the state Department of Environmental Protection, it did not receive more effort in recent years.

Part of the issue deals with the fact that most of the state's trout-production facilities are located at the headwaters of the state's best quality streams.

Since the facilities were constructed before the streams received additional protections from degradation of water quality, and never had to qualify for a permit to discharge waste water into the streams, the industry has sought grandfathering existing facilities.

The streams received the high quality status with the existing aquaculture facilities already in place and discharging effluent, therefore it has been agreed that they should receive such grandfathering status, it was reported.

But while the development of a general NPDES permit was nearing final stages, it apparently became shelved in the meantime.

The last several issues of concern to the industry were shifted around in importance.

The priorities for 1993 listed quality assurance as the next important issue, but since the federal guidelines for all meat safety processing have been since developed in the HACCP program, the issue is still important, but it was decided that the industry needed better adoption and information to deal with the issue, not necessarily more government assistance.

Instead the issue of water allocations and consumptive uses of water was moved higher on the list.

Growing water demands has created more battling over water resources, and groundwater withdrawals or diversions have proven to be a source of consternation.

While the Susquehanna River Basin Commission and the Delaware River Basin Commission both register water uses and oversee the approval of groundwater withdrawals, it was said that more of Pennsylvania's aquacultural users should register their uses with the federal-state compact agencies, so as to ensure a record of their historic water uses against future claims.

Non-native, also called non-indigineous species, are also of major concern. Bans and restrictions on raising varieties needs to be addressed better, so that aquaculturalists in the state can take advantage of opportunities to pursue new technologies developed in raising different species.

It was reported that such activities as raising freshwater flounder is being done, but not in Pennsylvania. There are other species of potential, such as a freshwater prawn (shrimp), but creating a clear, quick pathway for resolving issues of handling non-native species needs to be created.

While dangers to native and naturalized species from the accidental introduction of non-native species that could out-compete and destroy native aquatic life are very real, the issue needs a better mechanism for dealing with it.

The Fish Commission has much control over the introduction and propogation of non-native aquatic species, even though it continues to stock and introduce non-native species, such as the muskellunge, and brown and rainbow trouts.

Wetlands protection continues to be a big issue for aquaculture since many facilities were developed at natural spring sites and lie in wetlands and in floodplains.

Apparently, general maintenance of fish-raising ponds could cause a number of agencies to enforce wetlands and wetlands species protection laws.

Though a complete summary of the day's discussions are to be compiled and published by PDA, among the issues receiving the consensus of the group was that it would request that Secretary Hayes reinstate an aquacultural advisory board; seek passage of legislation defining aquaculture as agriculture; pursue the passage of DEP regulations for the general permitting of aquaculture discharge; seek cooperation by the state Game Commission in allowing the killing of habitual predatory birds (individual birds can and have learned to bypass various protective devices from screening to electrified screening) causing crop damage (losses); and to seek to continue to meet more regularly, such as perhaps once every two months, to devote more time to each of the issues.

Pa.'s Best Bushel Of Apples Benefits Two Organizations

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The highest bidder recently received Pennsylvania's Best Bushel of Apples at the 1998 Farm Show. This is the second year for this auction of Pennsylvania's finest apples.

J. Omar Landis of Ephrata, purchased the 1998 Best Bushel. The final bid of $250 earned Landis the best bushel of apples submitted by Hollabaugh Brothers, Inc. of Biglerville. Proceeds from the auction will be donated to the South Central Pennsylvania Food Bank.

Landis donated the bushel for auctioning a second time. This time, the proceeds were to be going to the Pennsylvania Auctioneer Association Youth Scholarship Fund. By the end of the auction, the bushel had sold eight times, raising $860 for the two organizations.

Hollabauth Brothers Inc. is an operation located in the heart of the Adams County apple industry. They grow more than 500 acres of apples, peaches, nectarines, plums, and pears. In addition to the growing of the fruit, Hollabaugh operates a Roadside market just north of Biglerville.

Milk Price Reform

At any time, Pennsylvania-produced milk can be shipped to surrounding states, or into the Southeast, southern states, or Mid West.

Likewise, milk produced in those regions can find its way easily into Pennsylvania.

Sometimes the milk leaves the state, gets processed and is returned for retail.

In calculating the producer price, the industry has been faced with complex pricing structures that don't necessarily fit with the reality of milk use, trade or shipment.

But over the years, different pricing classes of milk have been created to reflect the different uses of milk and milk components.

Very generally, Class I milk is drinking milk, while Class II is ice cream, Class III is butter, and Class IV is that used for manufacturing other foods.

If a processor makes mostly butter, or bottles mostly drinking milk, both uses need the purchase of whole, raw milk.

Since demand (consumer and manufacturer) for the individual dairy products varies according to season, and sometimes fad or rumor, the price paid for the raw milk to supply those dairy products varies.

In some cases, such as when the Northeast was shipping milk to the Southeast because it was short of drinking milk, the Northeast milk powder business and other users of milk faced short supplies.

However, in times when the drinking milk supply is satisfied, surpluses can get dumped on the rest of the milk-use industry, causing prices to plummet.

The way farmers are paid for their milk takes into account all the uses of the milk.

Even if the drinking milk price (Class I) is strong, if there is too much butter, then the low price for butter moderates the drinking milk price.

That was the case for years when the American public first took up the non-fat dietary fad and the government had large stocks of purchased butter surpluses.

Under such a price balancing system, even with high Class I prices the farmer can get a lower price for his milk.

The Minnesota-Wisconsin pricing series was used for years, effectively using the cost of production in the region as a starting basis to set price.

It has been replaced effectively by the Basic Formula Price (BFP), which places more emphasis on cheese values.

The BFP has been modified because of still-suspicious 1996 trading that occured on the Green Bay National Cheese Exchange (now defunct). The cheese price dropped significantly causing the price of milk to plummet, though demand for milk overall didn't appear to be diminished.

The event caused an uproar, especially since the Cheese Exchange represented about 1 percent of the cheese in the United States.

The USDA now prices cheese by surveying several different markets to arrive at an average.

According to Yonkers, the federal order reform proposal would change the BFP too.

Another change is that the price of milk within the proposed federal orders would base the price of milk according to where the milk is processed, or received.

Not where it was produced.

Yonkers said the proposed pricing structure reform would create a more incremental zoning change, to lessen the difference in milk price received near the borders of two different federal orders.

"Federal orders regulate processors who have purchased product. Federal orders do not relate to where milk is produced," Yonkers said.

At Pork Expo, Attorney Shows Farmers Ways To Control Nuisance Lawsuits

manure-spreading time, let's have fun," he noted. One producer turned a three-stage lagoon into a public golf course with sand greens, and anybody can come in as long as they help cut the grass every once in a while.

• Keep careful records on when the manure was spread, the times, the weather conditions (including wind speed and direction), and document everything. Document when and how the lagoon was agitated or turned. Andrews indicated that producers can be sure, if drawn into the lawsuit, that the neighbor's calendar will be offered into evidence.

Andrews went over the procedures involved if a nuisance suit could be pending. One way to resolve the problem is with a "mediator" who can settle disputes between parties without going to court. If that doesn't work, and going to court seems the only option, then the defendant will be served an "original notice," which provides 20 days to reply. That's the time to "contact Mr. Attorney," he said. It will involve answering questions, being part of depositions, listing to witnesses, and other matters.

What's the cost of litigation? A reliable estimate is about $20,000 to defend against a typical lawsuit, Andrews noted. But it all depends on the extent of the case and the lawyer. One case cost a producer 2,000 a day, which added up to about $30,000 in total costs. One case took a jury seven days of testimony and 22 minutes to come up with a verdict — and about $50,000 in legal fees. The producer won the case.

Some attorneys charge from $200-$300 per hour.

Moore's Forecast

Hog operations are going out of business at double-digit rates every year. Yet 61 percent of all hog operations in the U.S. have less than 100 head of hogs and produce only 3 percent of all hogs in the country, according to H. Louis Moore, Penn State professor of ag economics, at the Pork Expo.

However, operations numbering more than 5,000 head of hogs only constitute 1.1 percent of all hog operations (up from a year ago, at .9 percent). But they produce 35 percent of all hogs in the country, according to Moore.

Last year, 11 percent of the country's hog operations "called it quits," said Moore. Yet the producers that remain continue to increase their inventory, based on figures Moore obtained from the USDA:NASS Pig Report. Inventory is up 14 percent in Pennsylvania and nine percent nationally.

If 61 percent of the producers left the business, what kind of import would that be to the industry if they only produce three percent of all hogs? Moore asked those at the Expo.

Producer efficiency is making up for the loss of hog operators, with a litter rate that keeps going up all the time, according to Moore.

Moore presented his economic forecasts for 1998 at the Expo.

The good news, despite a massive check on inflation, low unemployment, and a booming economy with a record-breaking stock market, is that exports continue to save the industry. The country exports "twice as much (pork) as we import," said Moore.

The bad news: the trouble with Asian financial markets will impact exports and has many economists very concerned.

Pork exports in 1998 are forecast to reach 1.15 billion pounds (imports are expected to reach 615 million pounds).

However, this almost pales in comparison to the chicken industry, which is expected to export broilers at 4.75 billion pounds and turkeys at 575 million pounds.

"It's good that we're exporting that much chicken," said Moore, "because we're producing it so much that we need to find something to do with it."

Chicken exports continue to outstrip exports of other meat products. It is doing so despite the worrisome southeast Asian markets.

In 1998, pork production will increase 7 percent over 1997 figures, to 18.5 billion pounds of pork. Broilers will rise the same level of percent, at 29 billion pounds. Total red meat production will be 20 billion pounds higher than a decade ago.

"I never would have guessed that in 10 years we could have increased meat production 20 billion pounds," said Moore. We produce twice as much chicken now as we did in 1987.

In the next 10 years, could meat production double again? Some remain optimistic about the possibility.

Despite the press about more people being vegetarian, it simply isn't so, according to the Penn State economist. People are eating a lot of meat. They're consuming 216 pounds each of meat (compared to last year at 208 pounds per person annually).

As for hog futures, in the long term, most remain optimistic on prices. On Feb. 6, December futures were forecast at 55.80 per hundredweight. April futures were forecast at 55.42, July at 62.40, and October at 57.27.

Moore said he expects prices this year to be $8-$10 a hundredweight lower than last year, once again reflecting the tremendous growth and competition from the poultry industries and because of the fickle Asian markets. Also, grain carryover will remain dangerously close and if a drought hits this year, trouble could loom — especially in Pennsylvania, which has a tremendous shortage of grain, as more will have to be shipped in between now and harvest.

But as for a recession anytime soon — Moore doesn't expect one at all this year. It could happen more likely in 1999, he indicated.

Penn State Facilities And National Trichinae Project

Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist, provided an overview of the new swine facilities at the university.

He reviewed the new farrowing houses and nursery on site.

Also, Dr. David Pyburn, director of veterinary science for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC), provided an overview of the ongoing National Trichinae Certification Project being conducted by NPPC.

Pyburn said that trichinae, a nematode of all mammals that causes humans who ingest the contaminated meat to develop "trichinosis," has created a stigma in the industry, since it was a real threat to the product before the 1940s. The larvae embeds in the muscles of the animal and, when ingested by humans, can also create extreme muscle aches and fevers. Larvae can live up to 11 years in the muscle.

But education and eradication efforts beginning since the 1940s, when 16.1 percent of the U.S. population were affected by the infection, dropped to 4.2 percent in 1970. In 1995 there were 29 reported cases to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., of which eight cases were the result of eating "underprocessed cougar jerky," according to Pyburn.

Pyburn remembers stories being told by his grandmother about overcooking the meat to ensure the larvae were killed. In a national swine survey, in 1995, only .013 percent of the hog population in the country were infected with the larvae.

The national trichinae project was formed in 1994. A survey of 4,078 hogs on 156 farms in New Jersey, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Massachusetts was conducted. Only .37 percent of the farms tested positive, with less than .02 larvae per gram of muscle — "not a risk factor to humans," said Pyburn.

One survey indicated that some hogs on farms that were infected with the larvae were the result of eating rats. One fed wildlife parts to the hogs, from hunted animals. The survey asked the questions: are the hogs fed garbage? What's the wildlife exposure? Is there any hog cannibalism going on?

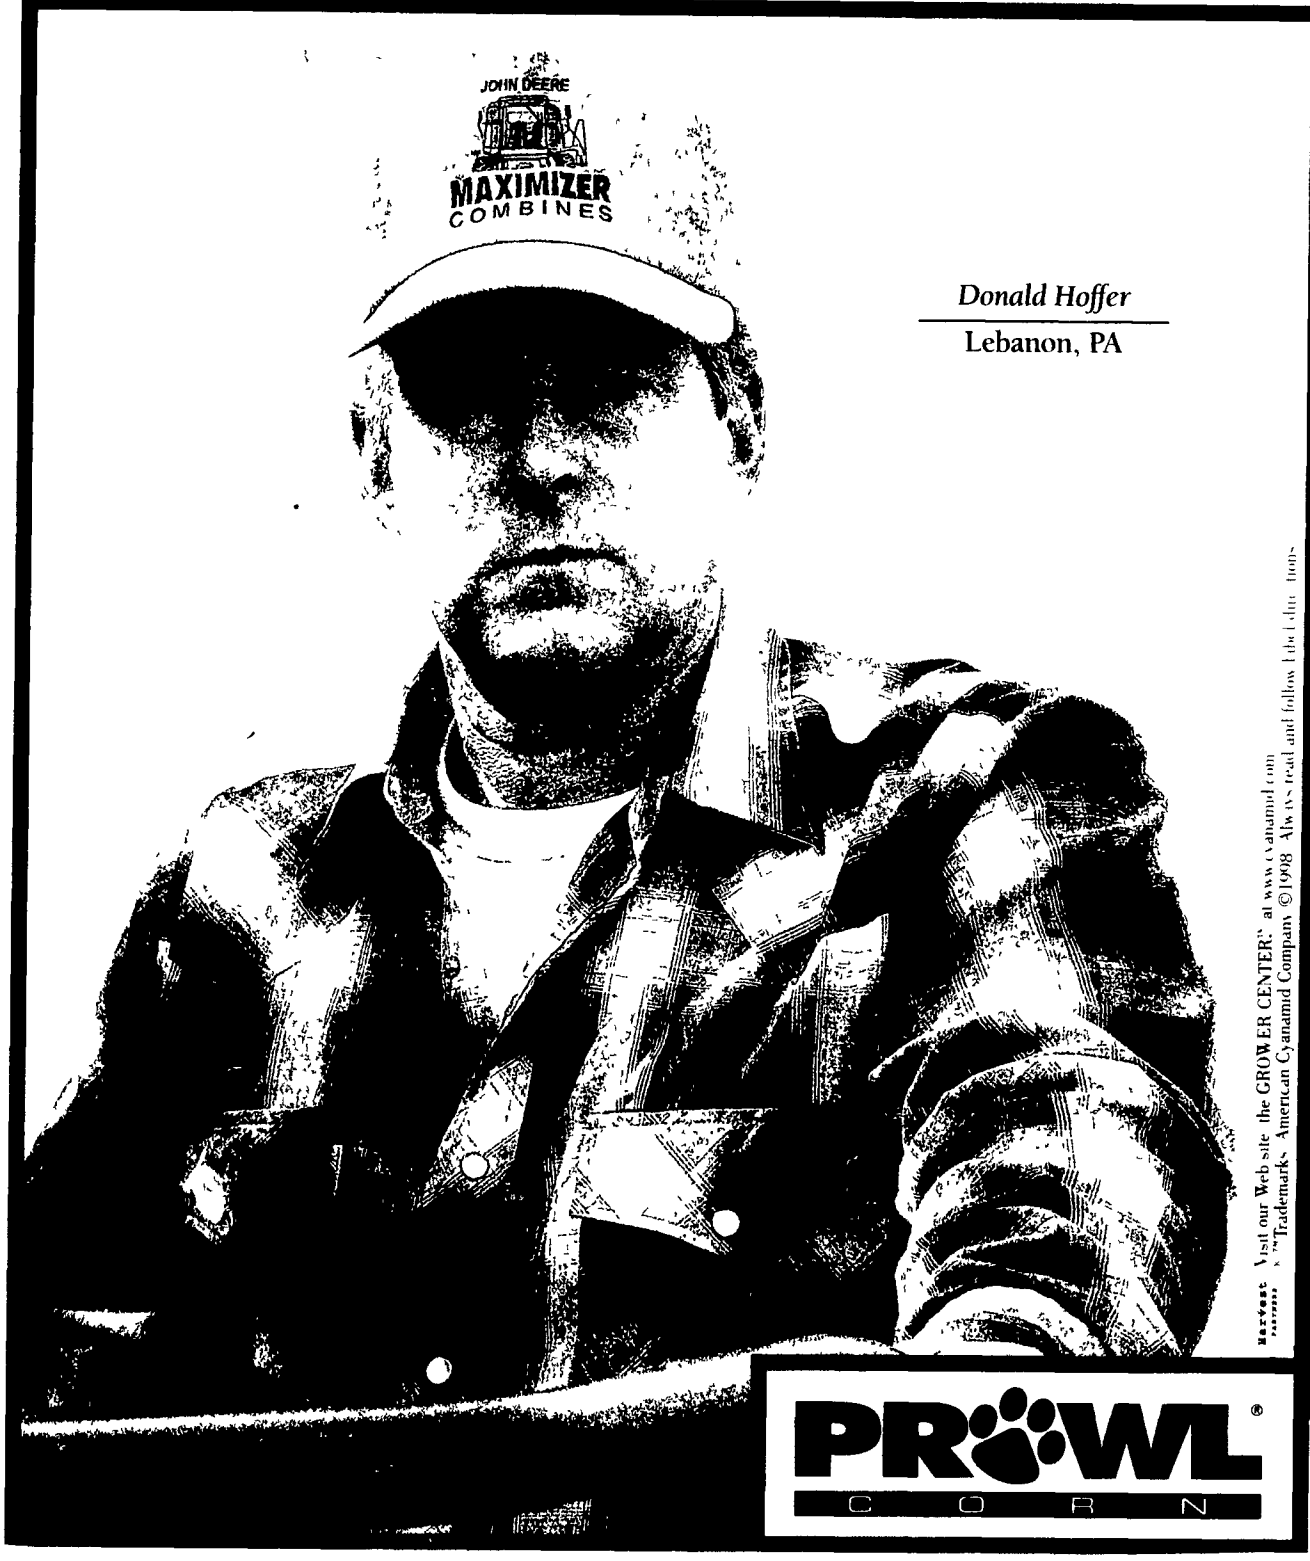
"WITH PROWL®, WE GET RESIDUAL WITH JUST ONE TRIP, WHICH SAVES TIME AND MONEY."



At Pork Expo

In a survey conducted in the northwest corner of Iowa, 222,816 pigs were analyzed and all tested negative for trichinae, out of 250 swine farms. The survey looks at the employment on- farm of good production practices (GPPs), using hazard analysis critical control points (HACCP) guidelines.

In the end, the study will "help change the perceptions of our domestic consumers," who need to be assured of the "safety and quality of pork," Pyburn indicated. Serums are being taken at the processing plant now, in the state, to help the NPPC with the national study.

Also speaking was Doug Goodlander, nutrient management section leader from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. He spoke about the "High Points of the Nutrient Management Act" and what it means to swine producers.

Also, silent bidding was conducted on the Legislative Activity Fund Auction at the Expo.

PPFPES Features Session On Milk Prices

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Seed technology, sustainability, biotechnology, precision Ag, and nutrient, crop, pest and lime management were just some of the topics addressed at the Pennsylvania Plant Food and the Protectant Educational Society's (PPFPES) 40th annual winter meeting at the Nittany Lion Inn, State College.

One of the most riveting sessions, though, came under the title, "Milk prices: how are they set and what can we expect?" conducted by Dr. Robert D. Yonkers of Pine Grove Mills, Centre County. Yonkers is an assistant professor of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology at Penn State.

Yonkers started out by saying the real title should be, "Why can't farmers pay their bills?" After analyzing the loss of government price supports, or parity, in 1981 and the varied regional reactions to milk prices, Yonkers tossed the bawling calf right back into the hands of the farmers.

"In 1981, the government got rid of parity — setting the pricing of milk by the costs of production. The government reduced its role. Since 1989, we've seen more instability in milk prices: we had a drought in '88; '89 was wet; export markets more than doubled and prices skyrocketd to then record levels. We had high feed prices in '96 until after harvest. In late '96 to '97, consumers spent less on dairy products and prices fell."

In other factors, Yonkers said dairy policy is no longer the "sacred cow" in Washington. There are external policy pressures such as the budget deficit, economic policy, and regional shifts in milk production. Yonkers says it's unlikely we'll go back to more government involvement. All of this agrees with the worldwide slant toward freer trade.

"The price of milk and the consumer price index used to follow each other," Yonkers explained. "But it hasn't affected all regions in the U.S. uniformly. From 1970 until 1985, milk prices increased with inflation. All states grew in milk production. Pennsylvania had the third largest growth rate during this time. Duriong the past 10 years, milk policy has slowed growth in the northeast. Wisconson thinks dairy policy stinks. But almost all of the states in the south and southwest grew in milk production. Not every region of the U.S. has had a problem with the levels or instability of milk prices in the past 10 years. That's why we're having a hard time getting everyone together on this issue."

As another consideration, Yonkers examined the implications of the 1996 Farm Bill. With the phase-out of the major commodity programs, Yonkers asked, "Who will support other Farm Bill provisions?" If food and nutrition programs are removed from the Farm Bill, "Will legislators from non-farm districts support farm legislation?"

With the government no longer in the business of holding stocks, Yonkers says producers must have a greater awareness of market conditions. He sees a greater need for effective risk management strategies by producers. Yonkers predicts producers will continue to see milk prices like this past year coupled with instability.

"Why can't farmers pay their bills? Experience shows that expenses rise to meet income! Costs have been constant in the past six years. The average income per cow hasn't been jumping around. The dairy industry is learning to adjust to costs. In a high milk income year, farmers need to sock it away.

"The question is not how many cows you milk. It's how are you managing the cows you do have.

"Farmers are slowly coming to realize that if this is the market environment, I'd better make adjustments to survive, or get out. Farmers need to look at what changes they need to make to make their operation viable. We will have viable 50- to 60-cow herds, but they probably won't be passed on to the next generation.

"It's not only an economic issue. Children are saying, 'Why can't dad come to my baseball game?' There are some sociological benefits to 2- to 3-family enterprises with 150- to 200-cows.

"The biggest change in growing is the change from wanting to manage cows to learning to manage people. To survive, dairy producers must either plan for an orderly expansion, plan for business growth, plan for specialization, or plant for a terminal dairy farm (one not passed on to the kids)."

Biotechnology Addressed At PPFPES Conference

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Plant Food and Protectant Educational Society held its 40th annual winter meeting recently at the Nittany Lion Inn, State College. The organization formed in 1958 specifically to "promote the discrimination of useful and practical information regarding all forms of plant food, plant protectants, plant genetics, biotechnology, soil conservation, economics, new technology and their application to crop production of all kinds; to foster and promote strong and positive relationships among ag industries, academia and ag public sector."

The organization did all this and more at its recent conference, and, as a result of a bylaw change, hopes to soon change its name to the Pennsylvania Agronomic Education Society, Inc.

Program committee coordinators Greg Roth, Department of Agronomy at Penn State, and Don Hartzler, Union Mill Division of Chemgro, welcomed everyone to the three-day event. The conference schedule was packed with interesting speakers on a wide variety of subjects — seed technology, milk prices, using precision ag effectively, nutrient management planning, biotechnology, software demonstrations, lime, pest, and crop management — even how NOT to be exhausted at the end of the day.

Society president Jeff Stine complimented Roth and Hartzler for putting together such an in-depth program, then introduced Dr. Steve Fales, head of the Agronomy Department at Penn State. Fales' talk centered on the tremendous advances in ag technology in the past half century.

"The Green Revolution increased productivity, but now that's played out. The population is increasing geometrically, and there are limits for response to fertilizer. Some of our tools have been taken away from us, starting with a 1962 alarm on the negative effects of ag chemicals. In effect, we've learned to farm smarter. Information, in areas such as integrated Pest Management, nutrient management and biotechnology, is our most imprtant tool."

Fales belileves agriculture is on the verge of a second green revolution, but agriculture still needs to deal with public perception, citing the public's skepticism about biotechnology.

"Agriculture is going to be attacked, and our industry must respond and must be prepared to counter. We haven't been able to speak with one voice. But an event such as this (convention), makes me optimistic about our future."

Dr. John Goette, director of Research, Seed Technology Division, at Monsanto, took to the microphone to address the question, "Where is seed technology taking the crop protection industry?" In his talk, Goette covered the science behind biotechnology, biotechnological crops, retail business surveys, the future of biotechnology and its implications to the crop protectant industry. He began with a global perspective.

"In 1997, world population stood at 6 billion people. There are 88 million people born every year. That equals the population of Germany and the population growth rate of New York City every month. It takes 5.8 million square miles to feed people. Without continuing yield increases, 15 million acres will be needed by 2050. It's predicted that there will be double the number people on earth in the next 40 years.

"In 1776, there were approximately 800 million people on earth. It took 124 years for the population to double. It doubled again in 80 years and is expected to double again in the next 40."

Goette cited the same revolution Stine mentioned earlier in the conference, specifically mentioning site specific ag (GSP), the biotechnology explosion, a decrease in government subsidies, sustainability, and increased food demands. Goette said the shift is toward more value added seeds, larger, more sophisticated growers and increased yields.

The Science Behind Biotech

Traditionally, plant breeders would identify desirable traits and try to breed these traits into a commercial variety. This process takes time. According to Goette, biotechnology allows plant scientists to reduce the time. They "simply" single out the gene and insert it into the commercial variety. The first generation of biotechnical crops included Roundup Ready soybeans and corn.

"Corn yields have tripled over the last 40 years. In 1900, farmers produced 25 to 30 bushel per acre. Now, we're seeing 130 to 140," Goette explained. "In the next five years, we're looking at high oil corn, starch modification, improved amino acids, and improved insect, herbicide and disease resistance."

Goette believes another huge area could be in biopolymers, such as in biodegradable plastics, and mentioned Monsanto's current and unlikely alliance with Greenpeace.

"Biotechnology is having a significant impact on agriculture. We need to get integrated solutions to the farmer. Biotechnology cannot control weeds. Farmers will always need fertilizer, herbicides, application service, and technical recommendations."

Goette told crop protectant business representatives at the conference that technological training of their people is critical.

Sustainability

Beth Carroll from the Novartis Crop Protection Division addressed, "Moving toward sustainability from an industry perspective." She began by dispelling some of the misconceptions about what the term sustainability means.

"It does not mean to return to old, basic technology. That's not a reality. It does mean adding new technology, such as in seeds. Another misconceptions is that sustainability is incompatible with existing farming techniques."

Carroll said Novartis is looking at new, more selective solutions; human and environmentally safe products; lower rate products; IPM compatible products; biologically-based products; and seed treatment.

"We're paying particular attention to the needs of growers, focusing on changes in large farm business practices; computerized information systems; consolidated customer databases; technology development; and the development of precision farming techniques. We're payiong attention to the needs of the food producers such as the food chain systems on an international basis; we're members of the National Food Processors Association; we cooperate with the food processing industry to ensure that the food supply is safe and of high quality at an affordable cost."

Milk Price Reform

To support that statement, he showed that Lancaster County has the highest number of producers in Federal Order 2, while at the same time having the highest number of producers in Federal Order 4.

That one county's dairy farmers can be the most influential in two federal milk marketing orders is evidence that, for milk pricing, location of the farm is not as important as the location of the processor.

However, the costs of producing milk have fluctuated along with the dairy prices.

Yonkers said that, as it seems in his own household, "Expenses seem to rise to meet income," suggesting that dairy producers can and do adjust their production costs to reflect changes in prices received for milk.

From some data collected from actual farm tax returns, he showed that total farm income and expenses have adjusted on dairy operations to provide about the same amount of net income during the past three years.

From the data he got from the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, he showed that in 1994 with a $13.75 per hundredweight milk price, that farm income was $14.91 per cwt., while total expenses were $12.53, resulting in a total farm net profit of $2.38 per cwt.

In 1995, with the milk price at $13.26, the average total dairy farm income from the PFB data was $14.51, while total expenses dropped to $12.24 and net profit was $2.27.

Then in 1996, with $15.26 per cwt. milk, total farm income was $16.56 per cwt. and total expenses were $14.01, resulting in a net profit of $2.55 per cwt.

Yonkers also showed the production cost disparity among dairy producers in Pennsylvania.

Using a graph that compared cost of production to income per cow, using a constant milk price.

The graph showed, that while not in the majority, Pennsylvania has dairy producers whose cost to produce 100 pounds of milk is between $8 to under $10. They received $500 to $1,000 per cow, in the comparison.

Those whose cost of production ranged from $10 to under $14 per hundredweight, representing the majority, made from $250 to $500 per cow.

Those whose cost of production was $14 or higher, lost money. They did not represent the majority of producers.

The proposed consolidation of federal orders would basically merge the region of eastern Pennsylvania with that of New York, New Jersey, Mid Atlantic region and New England states.

The western region of Pennsylvania would be merged with Ohio and the nearby region.

Again, maps detailing the proposal are available on the USDA homepage.

The proposal is to receive a 60-day comment and review period, and this fall release decisions made upon those comments, followed by a referendum vote.

The referendum question is be set so that those in the proposed federal orders regions would be asked to decide all-or-nothing for the proposal — either "yes" or "no federal order."

He said that, as with other USDA producer voting, cooperatives can block vote, which means that as long as an individual cooperative member doesn't specifically reject a cooperative's representation, that the cooperative's representation will make the decision on behalf of its membership.

Members of cooperatives should discuss the proposal with their leadership.

Yonkers said that the proposal also includes new definitions for the different classes of milk. The actual prices paid would differ from subzone to subzone within the federal order.

In general, the Class I price would probably fall in most areas, while the other, normally lower-valued class prices would increase.

The overall effect, while not certain, is expected to raise the milk price overall.

He said that the USDA projects that if the proposed pricing changes would have been in effect from 1994 through 1997, the average price would have been 77 cents higher.

Yonkers said the new Class I differential would go down in 28 markets, up in three and stay the same in the upper Mid West.

The new Class I price "mover," instead of using the BFP, would be to use an average of the Class III or IV price, whichever is higher. That is expected to increase stability of price.

The new Class II price, which has been to use the BFP as a foundation, is to be now based upon component pricing.

Again, USDA analysis shows that it would have increased the average Class II price up 54 cents from 1994 through 1997.

The new Class III price is to be a "cheese only" price, based on computations from cheese yield, which relates directly to the protein composition of milk.

If it had been in place during those years, the average price would have been 55 cents higher.

A new Class IV price would be for butter and dry milk, using component pricein for non-fat dry milk.

The analysis projected a 96-cent higher price if the proposed system would have been in place.

According to Yonkers, the Class I price is projected to drop by as much as $1 per cwt., but the farmer receives a blend price, blending all of the handler's uses of the milk and their subsequent values.

In order to phase-in the new orders and pricing structure, there are three proposals for slowly reducing the Class I differential.

Other proposed changes include an elimination of the marketwide service charge to cooperatives within a federal order, which has been charged in F.O.2 to pay for mandatory education services cooperatives are required to perform.

Furthermore, seasonal adjustments are to be eliminated completely.

He said a rough estimate of the net impact on mailbox prices the new proposal would have is a 1 cent decline for New England states; a .06-cent increase for New York/New Jersey; and a 33-cent decline in the current F.O.4 region.

The new unregulated areas — those areas not included in any proposed restructured federal order — would receive an estimated 96-cent decline in mailbox price.

If producers vote against the proposal, that would result in an unregulated area. According to a map Yonkers displayed, a strip of central Pennsylvania would be in an unregulated area, since the federal orders are to be more concerned with where milk is processed, not produced.

Overall for the coming year, he said he expects milk prices to increase by 20 cents to 30 cents.

Of course, he said that there is much talk about possible effects from the El Nino on weather across the nation. California has been inundated, and he said that rain has controlled growth of dairy production in California.

He said that carryover stocks of feed grains and forages are not high and poor growing conditions could also decrease production and increase price.

Overall, however, he said that farmers should not expect to find the new milk pricing proposals any easier to understand than the existing system.

He said that in fact, if anything, it is more complex than before.

Grazing School

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Dairy or livestock producers considering or developing a grazing system should consider enrolling in a six-part grazing school being offered during March and April by the Penn State extension offices in Lebanon and Berks counties.

The school is set to be held every Thursday evening from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m., March 5 through April 9, in the Vo-Ag Department of the Northern Lebanon High School.

The cost of the school is $20 per person, and includes refreshments and course materials. Checks should be made payable to the "Lebanon County Extension Service," and mailed to the attention of Galen Kopp, 2120 Cornwall Rd., Lebanon, PA 17042.

The deadline for registration is Feb. 27.

There is no homework for the last three classes.

The April 2 class is to feature a discussion with Dr. Lisa Holden on nutritional considerations for cows on pasture.

The final class is to consist of a visit to a farm, for on-site evaluations and discussion.

Berlin Young Farmers Hear About Deregulation Of Electricity

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — The Berlin Young Farmers, after thoughtfully listening to the unbiased presentation that Dennis Buffington gave about the deregulation of electricity in Pennsylvania, as the meeting closed, gravitated into threesomes and foursomes for spontaneous and low-voiced discussions.

Generally they seemed united, agreeing that small guys like themselves will profit far less from the coming choices in a roster of electrical suppliers than will big commercial users, who they expect to reap the greater good.

Nor is their breath being held in anticipation of an increased cash flow of their hard-earned bucks once the three-year switchover is said and done in 2001.

Buffington, who spent 11 years heading up Penn State's Agricultural and Biological Engineering Program, and now is teaching research and extension activities, however, expressed a firm belief that deregulation will prove positive.

Getting knowledge beforehand is critically important.

"We must prepare. I'm convinced there are going to be benefits," Buffington said.

"There's no doubt everybody will be affected by deregulation, how we buy electricity and how we use electricity," he predicted.

"Enjoy youir supper while you can," he quipped.

Simply, that means the power companies, will also do product campaigning at family mealtimes when deregulation of electricity is in full swing. Don't make any spur-of-the-moment decisions. Ask for printed material and think about the information.

Many choices will be available, resulting in a confusing maelstrom of information for some Pennsylvanians.

"The Key is education. Know how much electricity costs now so you can compare," the professor said, advising the meeting attendees.

Farmers should be taking a hard look at their current electrical usage to determine per kilowatt hour their cost of operating. Making some adjustments now is plain good sense in order to shop the competitive market later.

To accomplish this, he/she first must understand the utility bill which lists generation, transmission, distribution, local service and tax on separate lines.

Know which machines and equipment pieces in the operation are the primary users of electricity. Vacuum pump, milk refrigeration equipment and silo unloader, for instance.

Start managing the electrical demand by staggering the use of these items, especially if you are an "on-demand," charge customer.

Calculate the cost of electricity to produce 100 pounds of milk, a dozen of eggs, a pound of meat, a flat of bedding plants or a bushel of fruit.

Commercial business owners would figure their cost per customer, Buffington said.

Additionally, know what's happening with developing technology regarding the more efficient motors designed to reduce electrical consumption.

Sometimes, because the savings will be realized in daily usage seen over the long haul, such an investment is well worth the initial cash outlay.

Think smart, however. Only a thorough study of its potential value to the operation should precipitate such an important investment by those concerned with it.

Doyle Paul who buys electricity from his municipality wondered how deregulation would affect the arrangement.

"Berlin borough has its own electricity and sells out to customers," he reported.

"Most municipal power systems will be sticking with the systems they have now," Buffington replied.

Some three representatives from the Somerset Rural Electric Cooperative — one of the state's 13 rural cooperatives — agreed that the information Buffington presented was neutral in content.

Two rural cooperatives, with eight electric companies are participating in the pilot program. The Somerset REC, according to its representatives, isn't one of them.

"Your utility company wants to keep you as a customer," Buffington said. "They will answer all your questions."

In fact, the state Public Utilities Commission has developed guidelines for the deregulation process that include universal service and energy conservation programs; consumer education; support to low-income consumers and reliability of the electricity supply.

The deregulation phasing in process by January 1, 2001, will give choice to all customer classes in Pennsylvania.

The pilot programs are providing a deregulated environment in which both utility companies and some customers, before Jan. 1, 1999 are experiencing how it operates.

One-third of the customers will then make the choice of an electric utility company official.

Local providers of electricity, as now will continue to maintain the systems in their areas, even if the customer's provider is in another state and each month pays that company for the kilowatt hours of electricity used.

The Cooperative extension offices and the Public Utilities Commission have fact sheets and detailed information for interested persons.

Watershed Project Sign-Up

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — For community water improvement projects to succeed, groups must work in unison and as partners. This kind of interest and leadership must come from the grassroots level if federal project money is to be used to ensure safe drinking water, according to the head of the Lancaster County Conservation District.

Don Robinson, district manager, indicated that time is running out for farmers to sign up for cost-sharing for the Chickies Creek Watershed, including townships inclusive of and west of Manheim, under the national Environmental Quality Improvement Program (EQIP).

Under EQIP, farmers and other landowners in parts of Rapho, Penn, East Donegal, West Hempfield, and Mount Joy townships can qualify for up to $50,000 a person for the total of a five-year federal allocation of $1.5 million ($300,000 each year) to be spent on environment watershed protection projects.

The sign-up, sponsored through the USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) in Lancaster, runs from Feb. 2 through Feb. 20 this year. The money for programs may be paid after Oct. 1 this year for qualified landowners, Robinson noted.

To qualify, landowners must submit a proposal to aid in the improvement of water quality on the property. Those improvements could include the establishment of stream bank fencing, barnyard runoff control, storm water diversion projects, grass waterways, or some other water quality protection and soil conservation efforts.

The Natural Resource Conservation Service can provide free technical assistance and can write conservation plans, provide plans for terracing, contour strips, and other erosion control plans, and consult on proposals for the EQIP program. However, EQIP intends to look at those proposals that will provide "the greatest return for the dollars spent on the projects — if several proposals are submitted, those with the greatest environmental 'return' will get funded," said Robinson.

The FSA County Committee of farmers will make the selections and approve the ranking of projects. The committee will meet in March to make the final approval.

Recently the district sponsored water quality awareness meetings in the county to gauge what type of interest there was, literally, out in the field. The district and the EQIP program, however, is looking at "grass-roots" support from groups established to protect the water quality of the watersheds.

"The people who live in the watershed determine what the problems are and how to approach them," he said.

Robinson pointed out that a typical group is the Save Our Creeks Association working toward improving the quality of the Cocalico Creek in Ephrata Boro.

The 12 different Lancaster County watersheds are identified in a map supplied in the district's annual report.

One successful "partnering" project, Robinson indicated, was the Donegal Creek improvement task undertaken by several organizations on a 6.7-mile stretch of the Donegal Creek. Groups who worked together to improve the riparian aspects of the creek included the Donegal Fish and Conservation Association, the local chapter of Trout Unlimited, the conservation district, and other groups.

Interested landowners can contact the Farm Service Agency at (717) 397-6235 or the conservation district at (717) 299-5361.

Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference To Focus On Pastures

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) – The 1998 Pennsylvania Grazing Conference March 4 and 5 will feature numerous presentations and discussions focusing on pastures.

If you have interest in parasite buildup in pastures, poisonous weeds in pastures, pasture production during the "summer slump", applying manure to pastures, no-till renovation of pastures, or which pasture plant species are best for your farm, make plans to attend the Grazing Conference at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

In addition to these topics, many of which will include experience grazers as presenters, Sinclair Mayne, a scientist from Northern Ireland, will be the keynote speaker.

Dr. Mayne's grazing research with dairy cattle and beef at the Northern Ireland Research Institute is some of the strongest in the world. Sinclair Mayne's research has emphasize improving grazing management to increase intake and utilization of pasture. In addition, he has been involved in a long-term study to evaluate the optimum genetic merit of various cow breeds for grazing management systems.

At informally structured evening sessions on March 4, there will be the opportunity to ask questions and discuss with fellow farmers current concerns on your farm or the grazing industry. There will also be an evening demonstration about using the Internet to obtain access to a whole range of grazing information from your computer.

In addition to the structured educational program, there will be a trade show with company representatives available to showcase the latest in grazing technology. If it is New Zealand-style milking facilities or fence insulators that you are interested in, you can learn about it and purchase it at the trade show.

Using her background as a medical technologist, Williams developed a method of preparing candied flowers that can be made ahead of time and frozen until ready to use in garnishing.

Edible Blossoms Lend Elegance To Special Occasions

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Edible flowers might not be everyone's cup of tea—that is, until they see the elegant flowers that grace Jill Ann Williams' wedding cakes.

Dainty, elegant blossoms shimmer with her secret candy coating. Although the flowers appear fragile, Williams' method makes them durable. In fact, the blossoms will not shatter even if thrown on the floor, not that anyone would want to throw away the beautiful blooms that maintain their original shapes and bright colors.

Williams' said her intrigue with edible flowers began when as a child she lined up all her dolls and teddies for a tea party.

"I only did that often enough to become memorable," she said. "It's the same way with edible flowers. They aren't something you serve everyday—just on memorable occasions."

Williams demonstrated making edible flowers at the State Horticulture Association meeting held recently in Hershey.

She encouraged those in the flower business to consider the side business that can be developed with edible flowers.

Her own experimentation with edible flowers came as the result of paying an exorbitant price for some that were pale and crumbled when touched.

Her background as a medical technologist helped Williams develop a method of preparing edible flowers that do not violate the chemical principles.

Her technique includes immersing blossoms in water 15 minutes in order "to dilute off sprays" on flowers. Flowers are then thoroughly dried by patting with a tea towel. If the blossoms are put into a ziplock bag and refrigerated at this point, they will keep up to two weeks until ready to be prepared for eating.

After the flowers are covered with Williams' mixture that includes Silica Jel and sugar, the edible flowers will keep up to one year in the freezer. This makes it easy to prepare flowers ahead of time and garnish the food when ready to serve.

Williams is insistant that the flowers should not be haphazardly placed on food, but that they should be artfully arranged following flowering arranging principles using odd numbers and harmonizing colors.

She suggested using the leaves of violets as a base in food or block of cream cheese. She incorporated other plants such as ruby leaf lettuce and a heart-shaped beet cutout to garnish food. She stuffed apricot halves with cream cheese and topped with a purple pansy.

While pansies and violets are the most popular for edible purposes, many others are equally flavorful.

A wedding cake using the candied blossoms shows the elegance that edible flowers can lend to the occasion.

Williams said that she knows a man who grows four acres of dandelions for edible flower use.

Elegant edible flower candying assemblage kit is available for $18 plus $4 for shipping and handling. The kit contains complete four-step instructions and reusable material to candy edible blossoms and herbs with long-lasting results. Included is candying gel for 175 blossoms.

Flower Fields Is Blooming Success

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Nellie Call operates a blooming business called Flower Fields near Buffalo, N.Y. She sells flowers from May through November in a rustic-looking barn surrounded by three acres of flowers.

Through trial and error, Call has learned what works and what doesn't in growing and retailing flowers. She shared her insights at the State Horticultural Association's annual meeting held recently in Hershey.

Call grows a wide variety of flowers on three acres surrounding her shop, which is located in a non-populated area along a main road.

In addition to growing perennials, annuals, and bulbs in hundreds of varieties, Call also collects wildflowers to sell.

Call said that although she loves retailing, she grew sick of customers because they always wanted to talk, and she couldn't get her work done.

That gave her the idea to go self-service.

"People like to select their own bouquets," she said.

Call makes this convenient by placing different varieties in plastic sleeves and placing the flowers in buckets of water.

Her shop is filled with a profuse selection of flowers—another marketing technique.

"Inside the shop, you need lots of signs," Call warned, "because people can't seem to read only one sign."

In addition, she tells customers that she is busy, and if they want to talk, they can follow her around. She's found that people love to watch her work.

"The key to success in retailing flowers is to make sure the flowers last 7 to 10 days," Call said.

To maintain this life span, flowers must be conditioned.

"Do not sell flowers that aren't conditioned. They won't last," Call warned potential growers.

Freshly picked flowers are stripped of leaves and placed in a conditioning solution. A general mixture of 2 tablespoons vinegar, 3-4 teaspoons sugar, and 1 tablespoon household bleach to a 5-gallon bucket of warm water is used.

"The water used during conditioning must be warm," Call said. "Cold water is a shock to flowers."

The flowers are submerged in the mixture for 4 to 5 hours while placed in a dark area.

One of Call's biggest income makers is arranging flowers for weddings. "Decorating cakes with fresh flowers is my signature," she said.

Call never advertises but has found that word spreads.

"Think of all those guests at a wedding as potential customers," Call said of weddings.

In addition, she can charge three to four times more for bridal arrangements and still be much more economical than flower shops.

"Anything Martha Steward (guru of current trends in food, garden, and home fashions) is doing is in demand," Call said.

Nothing goes to waste in Call's operation. She keeps her prices lower than anyone else around her and is able to make a profitable living. She harvests every flower and intersperses smaller ones in bouquets that people seem to love.

Although she mostly retails, she also sells to a marketer who collects 20 percent of what he sells for her.

She also has a special arrange-

Coping With Holiday Bills

It's February and many individuals and families are experiencing the "holiday over-spending syndrome" — the realization of happy holiday spending, with tomorrow's paycheck, has set in. Tomorrow has arrived but the paycheck has already been promised!!

If you are experiencing financial difficulties, contact your creditors immediately and explain why you are unable to pay. Most creditors are willing to work with you in developing a revised payment schedule to fit your circumstances. Don't ignore your creditors. A number of things will happen if you do.

The process of collecting debts varies considerably from one creditor to another. It will depend on the creditor's policies and accounting procedures. Some creditors take action against late payments if you are a few days late. Others don't send late notices until you are at least 30 days late.

If you get 60 days behind, you generally will receive another request for payment. At the end of 60 days, some creditors will turn the debt over to an attorney or collection agency to collect the late payment. Some creditors will have their own representatives who collect debts. If a creditor turns your account over to an attorney, expect an additional cost in attorney fees.

After a period, if the debt has not been collected, you can expect some type of court action by the creditor. The creditor will file a suit in small claims court, magistrate court or state court in an effort to get the court to make you pay your bill. The court's decision is called a judgment.

The creditor may already have or can obtain the legal right to repossess the property in question. This means you lose the car, truck, appliance, or other item for which you borrowed the money.

Frequently, the creditor sells the property for less than the amount you still owe on it. If the item does not sell for enough money to pay off the lien, the creditor can file another suit for a defiency judgment to make up the difference between what was owed and the sale price of the item.

Don't ignor the suit. Contact an attorney immediately. If you fail to answer to the suit and fail to appear in court, the creditor will win the suit by default. If you appear in court, you possibly can work out an acceptable plan with the creditor. If you don't appear in court, you cant' defend yourself against the creditor's claim.

Money Saving Ideas For Future Spending

So you can avoid the credit crunch in the future and, if your family is considering an expense-cutting plan, you will want to look at putting your personal and family resources where they will be most effectively used. The main resources we have to look at are time, money, and talents. You may want to make a list of the items you may need that no longer fit into your new, "tighter" budget. Is there a way to allocate resources more effectively so that the needed items can be obtained? Can you spend time making something that you would ordinarily pay someone else to do for you? Can you use your talents to barter with someone for an item that you would ordinarily have to spend money to get? Or is it more cost effective to purchase something if you have neither the time nor the talent to obtain in any other way? These are questions you should consider carefully if you need to make purchases that aren't planned in your budget.

Managing Your Plan Effectively

Here are some more things you can do to keep your spending plans running smoothly:

- Choose a chief money manager.
- Develop a record keeping system.
- Develop a system for bill paying.
- Develop a system for handling money.
- Manage your credit wisely.
- Be flexible.'
- Make financial planning a family matter.

You can be on your way to a bright financial future and happier holidays next year with "planned spending."

HOME FRUIT PESTS: USE ORCHARD SANITATION

Can Fruit Crops Be Grown In The Home Garden Without Pesticides?

The simple answer is yes, but fruit quality may decrease. This is true in wet or dry years. Quality fruit, similar to what you can buy in the supermarket, cannot easily be grown without pesticides.

If you don't wish to use pesticides, you can employ many other tactics to reduce pest numbers on fruit trees. The first step is careful observation. Develop a habit of observing your trees regularly, and daily if possible. Look at the blossoms, fruit, upper and lower surfaces of the leaves, new shoot growth, and general color and angle of the leaves. Also be aware that if you see changes in the plant, they may not be due to pests. The plant's nutrition can cause poor leaf color or unusual growth patterns, and humans can also cause damage to plants.

An approach that reduces our reliance on only chemicals pesticides is referred to as integrated pest management (IPM). IPM integrates as many pest management tactics as possible. They include biological control; using one organism to control another by predation, parasitism, or competition; cultural control; horticultural practices such as specialized pruning, orchard sanitation, and planting scab-resistant cultivars; insect behavior modification such as mating disruption; and the judicious use of pesticides. Successful IPM requires knowledge about pests and the vulnerable stages of the crop.

For example, orchard insect pests like oriental fruit moth and disease organisms like apple scab and over-winter in leaf litter and old fruit left on the ground. Fall and winter clean-up of this debris is an important cultural control method.

Oriental Fruit Moth is a pest of peaches, plums and cherries. This insect over-winters as a mature larva encased in a cocoon. These cocoons can be found in peach mummies and other debris on the ground as well as beneath the bark on tree trunks. Apple scab, pear scab and pear leaf spot are fungal diseases that over-winter on dead leaves. Collect and destroy old leaves from these trees as well as from nearby flowering crabapples.

Although sanitation will not provide complete control of these problems, it may help keep the pest and disease levels down to a more manageable or tolerable level. For more information on fruit diseases and insect pests ask for, a newly revised Penn State publication, "Small Scale Fruit Production Guide." It is available for $9 at your Extension Office.

Dishes With A Touch Of Romance

Interested in feeding an appetite for love, health, and happiness on Valentine's Day?

Start your morning off by treating the special person in your life to Orange-Kissed Mini Pancakes with Orange Syrup. When it comes to romantic treats, strawberries offer everything your heart desires: flavor, fragrance, and fancy.

According to strawberry lore the luscious, heart-shaped berry has long been considered an aphrodisiac. For instance, newlyweds in provincial France traditionally were served strawberries in a honeymoon soup.

It was believed that the "double" strawberry had romantic powers. When broken in half and shared with the opposite sex, legend has it that the pair would soon fall in love.

Smooth the way to love with berries, souffle, and custard. Chocolate Covered Strawberries and Mushroom Kisses offer tantalizing new tastes. Then finish off the evening with either Valentine Butter Cookies or Heart-Shaped Chocolate Chip cookies.

HEART-SHAPED CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

½ cup butter
⅓ cup packed brown sugar
¼ cup granulated sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
Cream the above together.
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1⅓ cups flour
1 cup chocolate chips
½ cup chopped nuts, if desired

Measure ⅔ cup dough and press into a heart on the cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 12 minutes. Makes 3 hearts.

When cool, write a message with icing. Note: you can also make a large heart on a pizza pan.

ORANGE YOGURT

8 ounces orange juice concentrate
1 orange, segmented
16-ounce container of non-fat plain or vanilla yogurt
Fresh mint leaves

Mix orange juice concentrate with yogurt. Spoon into 4 dishes. Garnish with orange segments and mint leaves. Makes 4 servings.

ORANGE KISSED MINI PANCAKES WITH ORANGE SYRUP

Batter:
½ cup orange juice
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon baking soda
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup low-fat buttermilk
2 egg whites, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon vegetable oil
Nonstick vegetable cooking spray

Orange syrup:
1 cup orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Prepare the orange syrup by combining all ingredients in a medium saucepan and mix until smooth. Cook over medium heat until mixture comes to a boil. Remove from heat and cool slightly before serving. (Note: orange syrup can be made ahead and stored, covered in refrigerator, for up to three days. Heat before serving).

To prepare pancakes; combine ingredients. Spray a large skillet with non-stick vegetable spray; heat over medium heat. For each pancake, spoon a tablespoon batter onto the hot skillet. Cook over medium heat until a few bubbles appear on the tops and the undersides are golden brown. Turn once and continue cooking until the undersides are browned. Place 3-4 pancakes on a plate and drizzle with orange syrup. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings (six pancakes and ¼ cup syrup per serving).

TWO-FRUIT FROSTY

1½ cups fresh or frozen blueberries or huckleberries
1 cup frozen unsweetened sliced peaches, thawed
1 cup milk
1 cup vanilla yogurt
¼ -⅓ cup honey
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
Cinnamon sticks, optional

Combine blueberries, peaches, and milk in a blender; cover and process on high. Add yogurt, honey, cinnamon, and nutmeg; blend well. Pour into glasses. Garnish with cinnamon sticks if desired. Serve immediately. Yield: 4 servings.

Warm your Valentine's heart with a glass filled with plump, juicy, red strawberries. According to strawberry lore, this luscious, heart-shaped berry has long been considered an aphrodisiac. It was also believed that the "double" strawberry had romantic powers. When broken in half and shared with the opposite sex, legend has it that the pair would soon fall in love.

BAKED CUSTARD

4 cups milk
6 eggs, slightly beaten
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons vanilla
Nutmeg

Heat milk to very hot; cool slightly. Combine eggs, sugar, salt, vanilla, and milk just until blended. Set 1½ quart shallow baking dish in shallow pan on oven rack; pour custard into baking dish; sprinkle with nutmeg. Pour hot water in pan around baking dish, 1-inch deep. Bake in preheated 325 degree oven for one hour or until a knife inserted near the center comes out clean. Remove from water immediately and place on wire rack to cool. Chill.

Variations:

Caramel Custard: Increase sugar to 1 cup. Melt sugar to an amber-colored syrup in a small heavy skillet over medium heat, stirring constantly. Gradually stir melted sugar into heated milk until dissolved. Proceed as above.

Coconut custard: Add ½ cup shredded coconut. Omit nutmeg.

Chocolate custard: Add 2 squares (2-ounces) unsweetened chocolate to the milk before it is heated.

CHOCOLATE COVERED STRAWBERRIES

2 pints strawberries (preferably with stems), washed
6-ounce package dark or milk chocolate chips
6-ounce package white chocolate chips
2 tablespoons vegetable shortening

Line 2 baking sheets with waxed paper. Fit 2 pastry bags with small writing tips. Melt dark chocolate chips with 1 tablespoon shortening in a double boiler. In another double boiler, melt white chocolate chips with remaining shortening.

Dip half the strawberries in dark chocolate: Hold strawberries at stem and dip to cover two-thirds of the berry. Allow excess chocolate to drip off. Place berries on waxed paper-lined baking sheets to cool. Repeat process with remaining strawberries and white chocolate.

Scrape remaining chocolate coatings into pastry bags. If chocolate is hardening, reheat briefly over simmering water. Pipe dark chocolate designs on white chocolate-dipped straberries, and pipe white chocolate designs on dark chocolate-dipped strawberries. Let chocolate hardened.

Makes about 24 berries.

THREE-CHEESE MUSHROOM KISSES

4 tablespoons butter, divided
2 garlic cloves, minced
2 tablespoons minced red onion
1 cup sliced mushrooms
2 tablespoons chopped, oil-packed sun-dried tomatoes
¼ cup blue cheese
¼ cup shredded Gouda cheese
⅓ cup cream cheese, softened
1 teaspoon fresh chopped thyme
1 teaspoon chopped fresh basil
Salt and pepper to taste
6 sheets phyllo dough, trimmed to 15x10-inche rectangles
3 tablespoons butter, melted

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a skillet, heat 1 tablespoon of butter over medium-high heat. Saute garlic and onion about 1 minute until translucent. Add mushrooms, saute until tender, about 3-4 minutes. Add sun-dried tomatoes, remove from heat and cool. Beat cheeses, herbs, salt and pepper on medium speed with an mixer until well blended. Stir in mushroom mixture. Melt remaining butter. Cut phyllo dough into 5x5-inch squares. Cover with plastic wrap; phyllo needs to be kept moist and covered to prevent drying out. Place six dough squares on working surface and brush with melted butter. For each kiss, stack 3 dough squares on top of each other. Repeat stacking squares for each kiss until dough is used up. Place a heaping tablespoon of mushroom mixture in center of dough. Gather dough and bring up to form a kiss. Pinch middle and place on a cookie sheet. Bake at 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. Serve warm. Makes 12 appetizers.

It's been a lonely winter.
But maybe that's changing.

Fall was just beginning last year when we spotted the lone Canada goose on the pond. Last summer's family of eight goslings and their parents had flown off several weeks before. We presumed they had joined up with the growing flocks of V-shapes that honked over the farm morning and evening, en route to feeding sites. For a single goose to be hanging out by itself in the fall, when families are flocking up for winter, is not the norm. Opening day of early goose hunting season in selected areas had just passed. Western border of the selective, early-hunt area followed the interstate, splitting right through the farm. When this goose called to passing flocks of its kind but refused to join them we figured it had been wounded.

Several weeks passed. And nothing changed.

The lone — and seemingly lonely — goose stayed by the pond by itself. Others honked overhead. Occasionally, even a few settled briefly on the pond. When they left, our loner bird remained behind.

It would settle down for long hours on the distant bank of the big pond, a favored corner for our annual nesting geese families. Not far behind that bank of the pond are the cattle exercise lots and the walkway through which the heifers pass daily on their way to the feed bunk. Geese seem to instinctively know that the regular travels of the cattle help to keep predators — especially our hungry local foxes — at a distance, offering them that much more protection.

As fall moved toward winter, The Farmer noted that the goose was taking short flights, from one side of the pond to the other. I contintued to call to other flocks passing by overhead, but never joined them. Perhaps, we speculated, it's wounds were healing, but not the point of long distance flights. Perhaps, it would never fly long distances again.

But, by then, the goose had found another family.

Our dairy herd.

The big, beautiful bird spent increasing amounts of time in the feedlot with the cows, growing fat on the grain residue left by them. When we began grazing the hillsides to save stored feeds, a Canada goose nibbling grass at the heels of the cows became a familiar — and somewhat hilarious — scene.

And when we began to move the girls to the more distant fields above the house, the goose gave up the lengthening walk and took off in flight, landing gracefully amid the herd of black-and-white cows. One day, either tired or perhaps hurting, our mascot plodded right up through the back yard, taking a short cut to join its "flock" of bovine buddies munching away at the grass.

But now, my prayers about an injured, lonely goose may have been answered.

In mid-January, a flock of about 20 fat, wild geese settled onto the pond with a racket of honking and splashing about. They've become regulars since then, lining up along the pond bank, nibbling as a flock at tender grass shoots in the meadow, occasionally trekking out into the field to graze in the stand of dormant alfalfa. There is no longer a single goose mingling with the dairy herd.

Now, pairs seem to be splitting off among the flock. Sets of geese, with one larger and one slightly smaller bird, can often be spotted off somewhere to the side by themselves. Territorial posturing is becoming increasingly common among the flock, lending visual demonstration to the term "wild goose chase."

On this Valentine weekend, my heart hopes one lonely goose gets shot again.

By Cupid's arrow.

On The Farm With Queen Margeaux And Princess Morgan

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

WOLMESDORF (Berks Co.) — Dreams of becoming a queen or a princess rarely come true, but for Margeaux Firestine, 12, and her sister Morgan, 11, the magic wand recently dubbed them both into royalty.

Although, both have sparkling crowns to wear for one year, the sisters do not live the life of ease commonly portrayed by those in royalty. In fact, you could say, that the sisters are queen and princess because they both work hard. They were selected for this honor by the Polled Hereford Association, after they demonstrated their ability to promote the breed and the many shows they participated in.

Margeaux is the Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Queen and her sister is the Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Princess. To earn this distinction, the sisters have had many years of showing Polled Herefords, which are cattle with reddish coats and white markings. Polled means the cattle are bred without horns.

The sisters and their parents Martene and Mike Firestine live on Map Farm's eight acres tucked between two roads in in Wolmesdorf, Berks County. Actually their property sets half in Berks County and half in Lebanon County, which allows them to participate in the Lebanon County Fair and in the 4-H clubs.

Passerbys often admire the 30 Polled Herefords grazing in the fields next to their home.

Margeaux said, "Polled Herefords are good beef cattle, a calm breed, and are fun to work with."

Although their dad feeds and gives the cows water in the morning, the girls feed them in the evening and spend time walking and setting up the animals to get them accustomed to the maneuvers they need to perform in the show ring.

The Firestines breed the Polled Herefords by using artificial insemination.

"I treat my cows more like pets," Margeaux said. She also likes to help out with the birthing process and once helped pull a calf when her cow was birthing.

In addition to Polled Herefords, the girls also show sheep and hogs for 4-H projects. The Firestines compete at local fairs, the state Farm Show, Beef Expo, Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE), and at the Polled Hereford field day.

They are junior members of the Polled Hereford Association, the South East Cattlemen's Assocation, the Hampshire Sheep Association, The Southdown Sheep Association, and the Corriedale Sheep Association.

In 1997, Margeaux had supreme champion Hampshire ewe at the York Fair and Supreme Champion at Lebanon, and grand champion Polled Hereford at the the state Farm Show's Junior Show. In 1996, Morgan showed the reserve champion Hampshire ewe at the Farm Show, in the summer, the same ewe was selected supreme champion at Lebanon Fair.

The girls have accumulated many first through fourth place ribbons for Polled Herefords, sheep, leadline competition, and hogs.

Their mother often tells them, "Enjoy the experience of showing at the fair and the friends you meet. If you get a blue ribbon, that's nice, but it's just a little something extra to enjoy."

As queen and princess, Morgan and Margeaux plan to attend the Junior National Polled Hereford Show in Springfield. Unfortunately, the national show is at the same time the Lebanon Fair is held, and the girls will need to forgo the excitement of showing at the local show.

Animals aren't the only farm-related chores the girls are involved in. They help their parents farm about 200 acres. Much of the land is harvested in hay to feed their cattle. They need about 2,700 conventional hay bales to feed the cattle through the winter.

But the big project is their pumpkin field. They raise 20 acres of pumpkins, where they have more than 1,000 tour groups coming. Participants are charged $1.50 for the hayride, drink, cookie, and a pumpkin that they pick. The girls hand out the refreshments to the tour groups. Last fall a refreshment stand selling hot dogs was used as a special fundraiser with profits going to the On Fire Ministry, which is an youth outreach headed by Ken Winebark.

The girls' father is Mike Firestine, known by many farmers as the vice president in charge of ag lending for Lebanon Valley National Bank, which Fulton Bank acquired and will merge it with Farmers Trust Bank to form a new organization called Lebanon Valley Farmers Bank effective March 27. Firestine helped the bank grow from a four million agriculture portfolio to $130 million.

During the harvest months, the Firestines employ FFA students until Mike gets home from the bank.

Mike said that loading 60 pound pumpkins is a real workout. He can load a five ton truck in one hour by the end of the season.

Martene uses her degree in managing and marketing with the pumpkin project. In addition to the on farm sales, Martene also markets pumpkins to supermarkets, garden centers, and other stores.

Martene said, "I like working with the tour groups, which come nonstop from the second week in September through the third week in October."

The tours have gained such a reputation for enjoyment and being educational that the Firestines must turn down some requests because they have too many tours to accomodate everyone.

Martene also works with the calves, helps with tractor driving and hay baling.

Except for the day after Margeaux and Morgan were crowned and their pictures appeared on the front page of the area's daily newspaper, being queen and princess have not changed their lifestyle significantly. That was the day that Margeaux, who is in seventh grade and Conrad Weiser High School, was greeted at school with trumpets and a carpet that was laid out before her just like they do a reigning queen. All day, classmates called her Queen Margeaux.

Margeaux participates in band and chorus. She wants to become a pediatric cardiologist.

She selected that goal, she said, "Because I always like to study about the heart and I'd like to help little kids."

Morgan is in sixth grade at Conrad Weiser Elementary School. Both girls are A students. The girls enjoy singing and participate in their church's youth group, bell choir, and Sunday school.

Although the sisters have enjoyed many successes, they have also suffered some devastating losses. Morgan had a heifer named Sparkles that was reserve champion at KILE. In addition to having blue ribbon form, Sparkles was tame and easy to show. Unfortunately, Sparkles calf died inside her. Despite heroic saving efforts by the veterinarian, Sparkles died from infection.

"It was the first time in 20 years that a calf died," her dad said.

For Morgan, it was like losing her best friend.

Then another disaster struck. A freak tornado touched down on the Firestine farm and lifted up a shed that fatally injured the girls horse before it landed up on the other side of the road.

While losing a horse and a cow that are best friends has been difficult, the girls realize that good and bad things happen in life—even if you're a princess or a queen.

Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Queen Margeaux Firestine, left, and her sister Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Princess Morgan sit in front of the banners and trophies they have accumulated from showing cattle and sheep.

The Firestine family raise about 30 Polled Herefords on Map Farm, which is located partially in Lebanon and Berk counties. With their parents, Mike and Martene, Margeaux, center left, holds the halter of Dutchess, and Morgan holds the halter of Empress.

Tough Cookies?

WOOSTER, Ohio – If your latest batch of chocolate chip cookies seemed rather tough, your flour may deserve blame.

Ohio State University scientists are analyzing soft wheat kernels at the U.S. Department of Agriculture Soft Wheat Quality Lab located in Wooster at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center Campus.

Small kernels of soft wheat are sometimes considered to be inferior to larger kernels, and they could also possess inferior milling and baking qualities – giving baked goods a harder texture and more dense appearance.

USDA scientist Charles Gaines conducted a study distinguishing kernel size and kernel shriveling. Shriveling greatly decreased the amount of flour produced during milling. The shriveled kernels produced flour that resulted in smaller cookie diameter and higher alkaline water retention capacity, both of which predict how well a wheat will make various pastry products.

Small, non-shriveled kernels had slightly better baking qualities than larger, non-shriveled kernels – making the cookies larger in diameter. Gaines and other scientist think that separating small, sound kernels from small, shriveled kernels will allow millers to adjust their mill for the size of kernels being milled. This will improve flour yield.

"The texture (softness) of soft wheat cultivars has critical influence on milling and baking quality," Gaines said. "The measurement of kernel texture is often perceived to be influenced by kernel size; however, distinction is seldom made between the quality of small, sound wheat kernels and small, shriveled kernels."

Gaines and other scientists measured the effects of small, medium and large-size kernels of wheat. They found that the size of the kernels made little difference to the quality of the cookies. It was the shriveled kernels that had the greatest effect on the cookies.

"Shriveling induced changes in protein content, which affected baking," Gaines said. "As kernel shriveling increased to severe, cookie diameter decreased 8 percent."

The resulting cookie diameters of the severely shriveled grain were unacceptable in the lab's cultivar testing program. The result? Substantially reduced end-use baking potential for soft wheat flour produced from shriveled kernels.

Gaines feels that removal of moderate and severely shriveled kernels will improve both the milling and baking qualities of soft red winter wheats.

"Growers may come to realize that shriveled grain has exceedingly reduced value to the miller and baker," Gaines said. "That knowledge may mediate the way farmers handle situations when they're docked at test weight at the point of sale. It may also cause farmers to make an attempt at better management during production to avoid shriveling for their own benefit and that of the end user."

Gaines said soft wheat flour quality will be improved every time shriveled wheat is avoided in the marketing chain. Flour made from non-shriveled wheat will produce softer, lighter, more tender soft wheat products – like the cookies, cakes, pretzels, pie crusts and donuts everyone loves.

Harvesting beets in January? That's what Robert L. Green of Gettysburg did recently. Actually, the beet was overlooked from last fall's havest and continued to grow during the mild winter. The beet weighed in at 3¼ pounds and was more than 6-inches in diameter. His wife Phyllis said that her recipe for Harvard Beets calls for five medium beets or 1¼ pounds. Using these calculations, this beet would be the equivalent weight of 13 beets.

Poultry Association Serves Luncheon Fit For The Governor

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — It was a luncheon fit for the governor.

Although the governor did not show up at the luncheon sponsored by the Lancaster County Poultry Association, about 140 people did.

The luncheon was held on Saturday, Feb. 7, at the Water Street Rescue Mission.

According to John Mattilio, president of the Association, the luncheon is held in lieu of presenting a basket of poultry products to the Governor during the state Farm Show.

Because the Governor is inundated with gifts, the Association felt it would more appreciated to give of their time and money to those who are really in need. The Water Street Rescue Mission depends upon the generosity of others to help meet the daily demand for meals for the homeless and those down on their luck.

Poultry Ambassador Kendra Weaver presented a certificate to Gov. Tom Ridge during Farm Show festivities. The certificate stated that the Association was giving a luncheon at the Water Street Rescue Mission in his honor.

Although the Governor was unable to attend, the administration was represented by Deputy Executive Secretary Zoann Parker, who donned a hairnet and helped serve the luncheon to patrons.

Dr. John Schwartz, county extension director, and Poultry Ambassador Kendra Weaver and her mother helped board members of the Association serve the luncheon. Board members included Liz Martin, Tom Fox, Carl Rohrer, John Swartz, Rich Roejnic, Doug Mentzler, Ron Duvall, George Georges, and Mattilio.

The Association solicited donations and purchased some of the items to serve a menu that included Pennfield baked chicken legs, mashed potatoes, green beans, salad, applesauce, hard boiled eggs, drinks and three varieties of ice cream from Turkey Hill.

Mattilio said, "Serving food at Water Street Rescue Mission encourages others to give time, food, and money to an organization that survives by donations. The Rescue Mission is a self-help organization that is incredibly well organized. Although it is right in our (Lancaster's) backyard, it is not a charity that most people traditionally think of helping. We hope this will encourage others to become involved."

The Association wants people to remember that the occasional offensive odors of poultry farming is greatly offset by the nutritious poultry products available to consumers everyday. Poultry is considered one of the most appealing, nutritious, and economical protein sources available.

The Association offers educational seminars to the farmers, holds an annual banquet for county home economics teachers to update them on available poultry products and proper handling and cooking to ensure food safety, provides materials and speakers for the Ag in the Classroom programs, and sells poultry products at the Ephrata Fair Booth.

John Mattillo, president of the Lancaster County Poultry Association, dishes up ice cream at the Water Street Rescue Mission. It was the second year that the Association served a luncheon in honor of Gov. Thomas Ridge. The luncheon is given to replace the traditional basket of poultry products presented to the Governor as a reminder of the poultry products produced in Pennsylvania.

Plan Now For Profitable Flower Harvest

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — It's possible to sell $20,000 to $28,000 an acre by growing flowers, according to Thomas Ford, Fulton County extension agent.

At the State Horticultural Association held recently in Hershey, Ford offered pointers to growers on how to succeed in producing and marketing field-grown fresh flowers.

"The key is to grow stuff that is different," he said. "New combinations and colors attract customers. To find out what colors will sell, read current magazines to find out what colors are popular."

From past experience, Ford has found that almost anything colored blue and spike flowers are in demand.

"Dare to be different," he said. Oriental eggplant foliage had popular appeal for one grower. At the same time, Ford cautioned growers not to put too much ground into exotic plants.

Flower marketing is a growing business. In 1980, the Dutch said that the U.S. was the most underdeveloped market for flowers in the world. At that time, statistics showed that Hollanders annually purchased 103 stems per capita; Germany, 43 stems per capita; Great Britain, 29 stems per capita; and the U.S. market fell far behind.

In 1980, the Dutch spearheaded an agressive campaign to sell garden and cut flowers to the U.S. They made inroads into enticing Americans to purchase more flowers. However, flower growers in America started their own agressive campaign with the confidence that they could grow the same flowers that were being imported.

Strict quarantine laws also work to local growers advantages. According to Ford, "From 30-40 percent of all imported Dutch flowers are destroyed because of sand contamination."

More and more Americans are purchasing cut flowers on a regular basis. To capitalize on this growing trend, Ford encouraged growers to be aggressive when approaching florists, supermarkets, and other outlets for flowers.

Ford encouraged small growers to look at unusual markets such as restaurants, garden centers, and tourism.

White tablecloth restaurants need bud vases filled.

Another marketing technique that is growing in popularity is pick-your-own-bouquets. To decrease the danger of customers trampling blooms, beds should be planted four feet wide and 200 feet in length for this type of operation.

This concept is also popular at farmers markets where customers can select blooms from containers filled with flowers. Prices can be set by charging by the stem or by the bunch.

"The trend is that consumers want guarantees that flowers will last from seven to 10 days. They want no risk," Ford emphasized.

"No matter where you live—your product is fresher than those being shipped in from other countries," he said.

However, growers have learned the hard way that being fresher does not necessarily guarantee that flowers will last longer. Improper harvesting can ruin the most beautiful blooms.

"Quality is not negotiable," Ford stressed.

Irrigation and weed control must be maintained. When stems reach 8-10-inches, they need some type of support.

Ford said to harvest early each morning and transport to the water cooler as soon as possible. (Check Nellie Call's method in another feature in this section).

Water quality is important after the flowers are picked. Alkaline water reduces vase-life. Alkaline water can be acidified by adding citric acid. A pool pH kit can be used to check water alkaline levels.

Flowers do well in water with added sugar and citric acid. To prevent microbial growth, use an acidic solution and maintain temperatures of 33-38 degrees and relative humidy of 80 percent. Recut stems under water.

In preparing flowers for market, know the flowers. Some blooms must be shipped upright, such as snapdragons and most spike flowers. Stems will curl up if the flowers are transplanted on the side.

Ford said that the biggest mistake growers make is to think that they are going to make a lot of money from planting acres of flowers. Then they plant 10 acres in one or two varieties of flowers.

Herbs are used not only as seasonings but has delightful additions to flower arrangements.

Unfortunately, it's difficult to market acres of the same type of flowers. It's better to grow 12 to 15 varieties to sell in bunches or by the stem.

Potential growers must realize that flowers are labor intensive and should figure on spending 3-4 hours daily in picking flowers during the growing months.

Ford recommends starting by growing one-fourth acre of flowers. Investment is small for this type of operation. After a season or two, growers can reevaluate whether or not they want to expand the business.

To keep costs low, Ford recommends using plastic for a greenhouse. Although it's convenient to have a walk-in cooler, you can use a basement room with an oversized air conditioner. Check into government surplus sales for bargains in purchasing a cooler.

Soil testing is recommended. Generally soil should maintain fertility similar to that needed to grow vegetable crops.

For more information on flower growing, contact your county Penn State Extension or call Ford at the Fulton County Extension (717) 485-4111.

Wildflowers can be cultivated for the cut flower market.

ment with a greenhouse that will grow whatever she wants.

Call said that her background had well prepared her for her vocation. Although the family moved frequently, they followed a lifestyle of self-sufficient farming. "We were poor and often didn't have enough to eat. We learned to make food out of nothing and make do with whatever we had.

This concept has carried over into her business. Unlike many florists who think every bloom must be perfect in size and shape, she said, "I don't waste anything. I pick everything and sell it. People love it. They don't care if some of the blooms are undersized in a bouquet."

Her operation has been so successful that she sells all her flowers within 24 hours.

She sells basket arrangements to gift shops. The flowers in basket arrangements are those that dry in the basket.

Call studied at New York State Agriculture College and Cornell University in New York.

Call admits to not liking to pamper flowers. This can be avoided by starting flowers properly to reduce labor and problems later on.

She lays black plastic and straw between rows and uses trickle irrigation to feed with nitrogen. She uses lots of mulch and rotted manure, and sprays with Roundup herbicide.

Call purchased an used walk-in cooler for $700. She recommends that growers who want to purchase coolers consider used ones, which are often ideal for flowers although they may not maintain even enough temperatures for food.

Since she began her business, Call has doubled the barn size and is in need of doing so again.

Dried Flowers Not A Dying Business

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Nancy Linvill Dole flicked through slides of colorful dried flowers at the State Horticultural Association annual meeting held recently. While this isn't the season to dry flowers, it is not too early for growers to be plotting plans for planting, harvesting, and marketing.

Dole showed how Linvilla Orchards, Inc. in Media used dried flowers to their marketing advantage.

The orchard got its start in dried flowers 25 years ago when asked to decorate for a downtown hotel. The hotel was so pleased they asked them to decorate for a harvest show. The show was so successful that Linvilla capitalized on it. The harvest show now draws thousands who participate in hay rides, in picking their own pumpkins, and other fall-related activities.

Dole showed that simple touches such as twining bittersweet and dried leaves with apples can make a stunning display.

At first Linvilla gathered dried flowers and weeds from the hedge rows and fields to sell. They preserved beech leaves by dipping into a glycerine solution.

Linvilla dubbed the spot set aside for marketing the dried materials the Weed, Pod, and Posey Shop.

But the demand grew, and plants could not be harvested haphazardly from fence rows. For a while the orchard tried growing flowers for drying. But the time consuming adventure proved costlier than importing flowers from Australia, Africa and other countries.

Linvilla changed the name of the section that displays the dried flowers to Hayloft Gift Shop, reflecting the change in marketing strategy to display the flowers with gift items.

The most important factor in marketing dried flowers, she said, is "display, display, display."

It may be as simple as a bunch of baby's breath in a crock or an elaborate arrangement of imported flowers, but the area must be eye-catching. Unusual blooms add interest and focal points.

Old tables, cupboards, wagon wheels, wooden wheel barrows and an old window frame are incorporated into displays.

Dole uses yards of fabric to cover tables and boxes on which to set arrangements. The fabric adds color and texture that compliment the arrangements. The fabric also can be used to cover boxes on which to build a multilevel display.

In addition, ribbon in all varieties, textures, and patterns are sold.

Linvilla has found it profitable to offer classes by taking one flower arrangment and providing all the materials and instructions to duplicate the arrangement. While they offer both morning and evening classes, the evening classes are by far the most popular.

Special events are held throughout the year that capitalize on showcasing the dried flower department. One of these events is a craft show. Crafters are carefully selected with no dealers allowed. Space is sold. At first, Linvilla feared that the craft show might take away from their own market, but they have found it works the opposite.

"Some stands sell dried flowers, but the show attracts a lot of crafters who will buy raw materials from Linvilla for their projects," Dole said. "There is enough business to share. Sharing is good," she said.

Press releases about upcoming events draw thousands of customers. Linvilla asks for local fire company volunteers to provide parking services.

In Pennsylvania, a climate controlled drying room is a necessity. Because light fades dried materials, the displays must be protected.

Apple Industry Rewards Retailers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Produce manager's displays have been selected as the top fall apple displays in the 1997 Pennsylvania Apples retail display contest held in celebration of National Apple Month. Fourteen managers vied for $2,600 in cash prizes. Each first-place winner receives $500 in prize money for his/her creative efforts.

The winning displays were selected from entries submitted from more than 14 supermarket chains and wholesalers based in Pennsylvania and New York. These retailers represent more than 1,400 supermarkets in the mid-Atlantic Region. Produce managers built creative displays in their stores that featured Pennsylvania's Eastern Select apples and apple products.

Judging criteria focus heavily on volume and variety of fresh apples displayed; all first-place winners displayed a minimum of six varieties of apples. Winning displays also earned points for creativity, shopability, and cross merchandising.

Contest entries were judged by geographic location of the supermarket. First-place winners included: in the Eastern Region: Giant Food Store #59, Mechanicsburg; Western Region: Kittanning Foodland, Kittanning.

"This annual contest boosts sales, builds enthusiasm, and provides a partnership between the apple industry and retail produce managers," said Brenda Beleski Briggs, director of the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Program. "The 1997 entries showed that the produce managers put a tremendous amount of effort into building impressive and effective displays. Winning produce managers reported that sales of fresh apples increased by as much as 17 percent."

Food Safety Workshop

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Volunteers at banquets, community festivals or church suppers often just rely on the cooking skills they use at home to prepare food for several hundred people. Professional chefs knwo the secrets for safely cooking foods in large quantities. Now non-professionals can know them too.

A Penn State workshop for occasional quantity cooks, the people who occasionally volunter at events where food is cooked or served to a crowd, is available for your organization. Nancy Wiker, extension agent with Penn State Cooperative Extension and certified master food handler, will train your group of 10 or more in safe food handling techniques.

Foodborne illness strikes Americans more than 12 million times each year. More than three quarters of the outbreaks are blamed on food eaten outside the home. While such illnesses can be as mild as a stomachache, it can be more serious and sometimes fatal. Children and the elderly are among those who are most at risk.

Penn State encourages persons with disabilities to participate in its programs and activities. If you anticipate needing any type of accommodation or have questions about the physical access provided, please contact our office (717-394-6851) in advance of your participation or visit.

The next scheduled workshop at the Farm and Home Center is on Tuesday, February 17, from 6-9 p.m. The cost is $5 per person. Additional workshops may be requested for a group of 10 or more at your site. Call Nancy Wiker, Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 394-6851 for information.

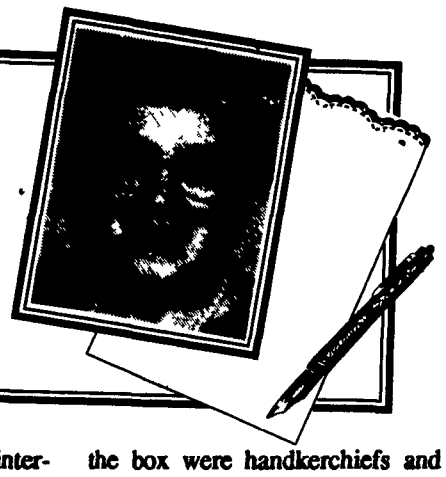
Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser



Every now and then it is interesting to look back and remember things in the past. Recently, I spent several days looking over papers in old boxes. I've always saved a lot of newspaper clippings and letters.

As this is Valentine's Day, I'll tell you about a few that I found. One was a handmade one that I gave my Grandma Landis. She lived with us and helped me out of some predicaments. One Valentine was from a boy in the third grade that I admired. There were also large, fancy stand-up Valentines that I still display on the 14th of February.

Among the things that were in the box were handkerchiefs and more handkerchiefs as they were given as gifts to children. There was even a list of the money that I was given. Five cents from an aunt and 10 cents from my grandfather. My baby book said that when I was a baby my mother called me her little "Dolly." My tin cup that I used was included along with a box of almost unused crayons. Several books of nursery rhymes were there too.

The past few days I've also looked over hundreds of slides. My cousin took these pictures and some are especially beautiful. They've been sorted into groups such as flowers, pets and vacations. Some from the 1950s show the results of a blizzard. Snow drifts 15 feet high closed the roads. Other slides are of groups of people who I cannot identify. Someday they'll probably be destroyed.

Now it is time to get back to the present and accomplish something worthwhile before the winter is gone.

Food More Affordable Now Than 25 Years Ago

CAMP HILL (Dauphin Co.) — Between Jan. 1 and Feb. 9, the average American has earned enough income to pay for his or her family's entire 1998 food supply, according to Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

As a result, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau commemorated Feb. 9 as Farm Bureau's second annual Food Check-Out Day. Last year, Food Check-Out Day fell on Feb. 10.

According to statistics from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service, American families and individuals spend, on average, 10.9 percent of their disposable income for food. That means the average household will have earned enough disposable income — that portion of income available for spending or saving — to pay for their annual food supply in just 40 days.

"The early occurrence of this date is noteworthy," said Jenny Teeter, chairperson of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's State Women's Committee. "It speaks well of our nation's increasing standard of living, which would certainly be reduced without the affordable, domestic, food supply produced by America's farmers and ranchers."

In comparison to Food Check-Out Day, Tax Freedom Day — the day the average American had earned enough money to pay federal, state and local taxes — was May 9 last year, according to the Tax Foundation.

"I find it amazing that people can pay for their yearly food supply three months earlier than it would take them to satisfy their tax burden," said Teeter. "Rather than being an economic burden, food remains quite a bargain for shoppers. That's the way it should be."

Teeter hopes Americans will come to understand that affordable food is "a product of our successful food production and distribution system."

The percent of disposable income spent for food has declined over the last 25 years. In 1970, Food Check-Out Day would have been 11 days later — February 20. Food is more affordable today due to a widening gap between growth in per-capita incomes and the amount of money spent for food, according to USDA.

This overall decrease is made more notable by the fact that trends indicate Americans are buying more expensive convenience food items for preparation at home, as well as more food away from home. USDA's latest statistics, compiled for 1996, includes food and non-alcoholic beverages consumed at home and away from home.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a voluntary, non-governmental organization which represents 25,247 farm and rural families.

"Look, Pappy. Let's check this one out," 21-month-old Kyle seems to say as he circles a mailbox market ad. Just like his grandpa Ricki Bashore, Kyle, son of Stacy and Rick Bashore of Lebanon, prefers to study newspaper ads while eating breakfast.

4-H Expands Through Partnerships

COLUMBUS, Ohio – Ask someone who has been farming awhile what 4-H is, and he might reminisce about showing livestock and going to camp. And of course, his sister took clothing and cooking.

Ask Ohio children to describe 4-H today, and they probably will talk about fairs, clothing and camp; they are still integral parts of the program. But you would also hear about school enrichment programs, entrepreneurship programs, youth-at-risk activities, urban gardening and a whole lot more.

"The challenge of today's 4-H program is to strike a balance between serving the traditional audiences, while reaching out to new audiences," said David Andrews, assistant director of 4-H Youth Development, Ohio State University.

This year, Feb. 22 through Feb. 28 marks Ohio 4-H Week. During this week, 4-H specialists, members and volunteers make a special effort to communicate the diversity of projects and learning experiences available to potential 4-H members and volunteers. More than 200 curriculums provide a variety of options for learning, from the traditional areas of agriculture, sewing and cooking to the arenas of computer science, photography and leadership on the job. There are currently 230,000 4-H members and 35,000 volunteers who participate in Ohio 4-H.

Many 4-H programs are establishing partnerships with new organizations, Andrews said. Not only can 4-H reach more urban and suburban youth this way, but partnerships help make better use of available resources. For decades counties have funded 4-H. But in larger area, county commissioners must serve too many people to provide all of the funds for one program. In these areas 4-H is seeking additional funding partners.

A newly formed partnership with Five Rivers Metro Park in Dayton is one example. The park has dedicated a building for educational programs for Extension and the park, and Extension is hiring two people to staff the facility.

Urban Gardening, a staple in many urban areas, will also grow this year to include youth-centered activities. The idea is to go beyond learning how to grow plants and vegetables. Youth will be actively involved in programs involving the gardens that would promote their overall personal and leadership development, Andrews said.

The Teen Bridges program paired with AmeriCorps this past year. AmeriCorps is a national service program funded and operated through the Ohio Governor's Community Service Commission and the Corporation for National and Community Service. An extension of the established CarTeens program, Teen Bridges is a peer-mentoring program that teaches responsible driving to teens. Thanks to a two-year grant, volunteers in 19 counties have coordinated and expanded programs around Ohio.

Ohio 4-H is also partners with RISE, a Cincinnati-based agency that addresses volunteer training. The two received $800,000 from the Ohio legislature, on the condition they obtain matching funds, to develop training materials for volunteers on how to best work with youth.

The materials, projected to be piloted in Ohio this fall, will cover child development, youth development and the best practices for reaching different age groups. It's aimed at anyone working with kids in a volunteer capacity, Andrews said. Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and the

Is Chocolate Fattening?

Does chocolate contain a lot of fat, or is sugar the problem?

Sorry to be the bearer of bad news, but actually, the problem is both.

Pure chocolate is about 50 percent cocoa butter, one of the few saturated fats that comes from plants. Most of the saturated fat in cocoa butter is in the form of stearic acid, which some researchers say isn't as bad for the heart as other saturated fatty acids. But Ohio State University researchers say, "Don't count on it." There are just too many questions on how different fatty acids react in the body to rely on scattered findings of small studies.

An ounce of pure chocolate contains about 15 grams of fat – that's more than what is in 4 ounces of a porterhouse steak and close to one-fourth of the amount of fat you should probably eat in one day, especially if you're on a cholesterol-lowering diet.

But you probably wouldn't want to eat pure chocolate anyway. In its pure form, chocolate is quite bitter – it's sold as "unsweetened" chocolate. With sugar added to produce the delicacy we know and love, the fat content of one ounce is reduced to 9 or 10 grams, but, unfortunately, the calories remain about the same at 145. No matter how you look at it, that's a lot of calories packed into an ounce of anything.

Some chocolate-lovers see carob as their saving grace. Carob powder is made from the seeds of the carob tree and gets only about 2 percent of its calories from fat. But when carob is made into candy, fat is added. The more carob reminds you of chocolate, the more fat it contains.

Using cocoa powder might be a better answer for getting a chocolate fix. It's made by pressing most of the cocoa butter out of pure chocolate. One ounce, about 1/3 of a cup, contains only 5 grams of fat and about 70 calories. Still, to use cocoa powder in a recipe, you usually are asked to add sugar or fat or both.

So what's the answer? Forget fat and calories when eating chocolate. Just enjoy it! But do so in moderation. That means: If you're the type to sit in front of a box of chocolates until they're gone, make sure it's a tiny sampler box.

4-H Expands Through Partnerships

Boys and Girls Clubs and Big Brother/Big Sister also are collaborating on the project.

"There is very little material out there on how volunteers can work more effectively with youth," Andrews said. "4-H spends most of its time on content, as do the other groups.

"You're not going to have most adults willingly go to an all-day training session on working effectively with youth," Andrews added. "But you will get volunteers to a workshop on fitting sheep or a sports clinic. That's the hook to attract volunteers."

The material can be delivered through a three-hour teleconference or broken down into smaller sections. Organizers could easily take 15 minutes of a subject-matter clinic to cover how to effectively address a particular situation or behavior.

"4-H needs to be supportive to all youth," Andrews said. "4-H receives public funds to run from the state's premier research and land-grand university. It's our job to disseminate that information to other youth organizations. Programs formed through partnerships might not look like traditional 4-H events, but you don't have to stamp a green clover on something and send it to the fair to have a sweeping effect on kids."

Dairy Of Distinction Program Again Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey, will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from a roadside point of view. Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during your local June Dairy Month activities.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

For New York State applications are available from Carol Keene, RD 1, Box 31, Gilbertsville, NY 13776. Phone: (607) 783-2169.

For New Jersey applications, send to: August Knispel, 641 Sidney Road, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: (908) 735-4989.

All applications must be completed and returned to your state secretary by Wednesday, April 15, 1998.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Storytelling Makes A Comeback

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) – Storytelling is an age-old art of passing stories orally from person to person.

It's something the early settlers did as they sat around their cabins on dark winter evenings with only a candle for light.

American Indians are also renown for their storytelling abilities.

One Pennsylvania lady who has been doing all she can to help with the promotion of storytelling is Jan Kinney of Altoona

Jan was a librarian at Hollidaysburg High School when she first learned the art of storytelling and saw it as a way to encourage children to read.

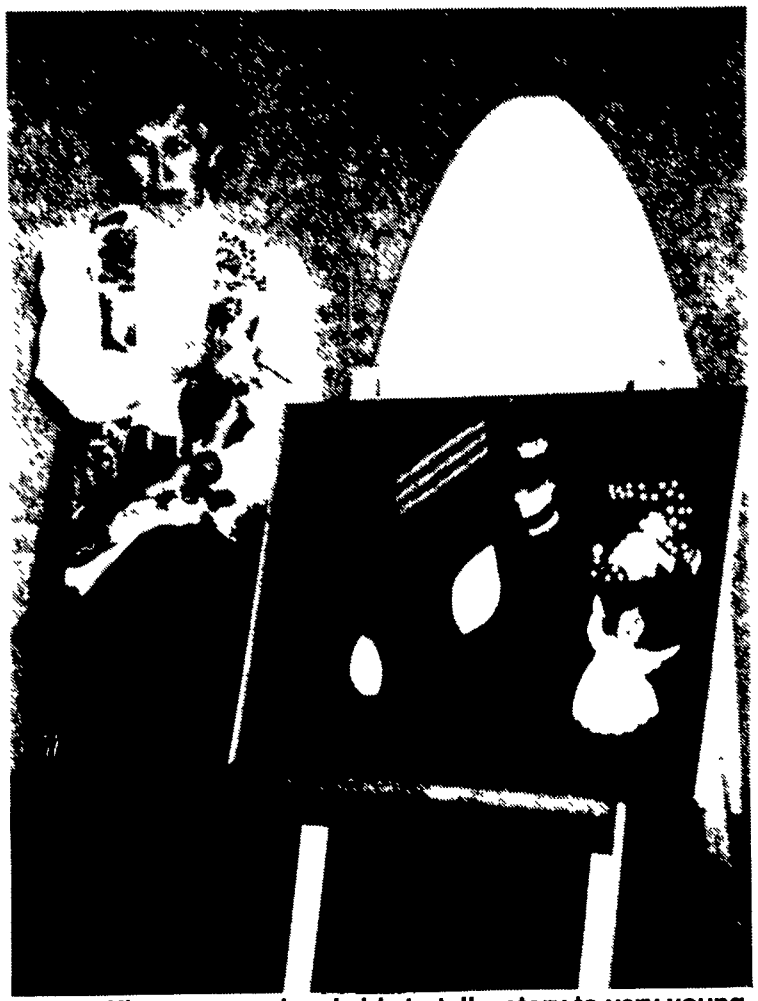
"It takes long hours of practice," Jan admits. "I read each story four times. Then, I write it down as I remember it and finally practice telling it aloud with the help of a tape recorder."

It is necessary to obtain the permission of an author before publically telling a story you have read. If that story is a fable or an old fairy tale, this is not necessary. There are many books of stories written just for the storyteller.

Jan Kinney encourages children and adults to learn the art of storytelling. It's a great way to entertain at your next family gathering or summer picnic.

On the second Monday evening of each month, Jan leads a group of storytellers at the Altoona Library. Children and their parents come from surrounding areas to listen to Jan and the others in her group who have also become storytellers.

They use the fluctuation of their voices as well as their hands and body movements to make the story interesting.



Jan Kinney uses visual aids to tell a story to very young children. For older children and adults, she uses only her voice, hands, and body to enhance the story.

Children as well as adults are enthralled with the various tales.

Sometimes, storytellers write their own stories. It is Jan Kinney's desire to research the Altoona and Cambria County areas for her own ghost stories.

Jan, a grandmother, tells stories in schools, at festivals and community events, churches and museums. Each year she organizes a storytelling haunt of the Baker's Mansion, an historic home located in the Altoona area.

In October, a huge national storytelling festival is held in Jonesborough, Tennessee. There is also a very popular Corn Island Festival held in Kentucky in September.

Also in September, a storytelling festival is held at Mansfield University in Pennsylvania.

Perhaps you know of a storyteller in your area who could help arrange a workshop for children.

For more information from Jan, contact her at (814)943-1080 or you can write her at 1900 16th Avenue, Altoona, Pennsylvania.

Teach Farm Safety In Your Community

COLUMBUS, Ohio – Adult farmers know they can drown in a gravity bed full of grain. The grain shifts, making it impossible to get secure footing. And if the grain is flowing out, the force of gravity can quickly pull someone under the surface.

But to a child, that potentially dangerous mound of grain look like a perfect place to play.

Each year, about 300 children die and more than 24,000 are seriously injured on farms nationwide. Day-long farm safety camps increase children's awareness of potential hazards through powerful demonstrations and hands-on activities, said Dee Jepsen, a youth safety coordinator at Ohio State University.

Anyone interested in teaching agricultural safety to kids and farm families is invited to attend an upcoming training program, Jepsen said. The program, "Conducting Farm Safety Day Camps in Your Community," will guide participants through everything they need to know to hold a day camp. The Feb. 26 program will be held on the campus of Ohio State University.

"We're trying to establish 10 day camps across the state," Jepsen said. "We're looking for community coordinators to take these programs to the kids."

The morning session will teach participants about the mechanics of planning a camp, including gaining community support, obtaining sponsorship, selecting a camp site, publicizing the event and estimating needed supplies.

In the afternoon, participants will learn how to put on an interactive camp.

"Participants will leave with materials that will guide them through every program, from supplies needed to safety precautions," Jepsen said. "People will see how the demonstrations are done and learn how to present them."

For example, to show how quickly someone can be entangled in a power-take-off unit, teachers can catch a stuffed dummy in the unit. To do this demonstration safely, choose newspaper instead of straw to stuff the dummy, use sweatpants instead of jeans, and remove all buttons from the shirt. All these steps prevent flying debris such as straw shards, zippers or buttons from hitting a spectator.

Typically, farm safety camps cover six to 10 areas. Of those, tractor and equipment safety, poisons, and livestock handling and drowning – in either water or grain – are always included. The other areas vary according to the needs of the community, Jepsen said. Coordinators from last year's camps will also be on-hand to provide their tips for putting on a successful camp.

The 10 day camps in 1998 will be sponsored by Nationwide Insurance, Ohio Farm Bureau and Ohio State University Extension. Seed monies and camp T-shirts are available; applications will be at the training sessions.

The program will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Agricultural Engineering Building. The $20 registration fee includes the Leader's Guide and resource notebook for designing Farm Family Safety & Health Workshops, video and publication resources that are appropriate for various rural audiences, and lunch.

Fore more information or to register, contact Dee Jepsen, 222 Ag. Engineering Building, 590 Woody Hayes Drive, Columbus, Ohio 43210, or call (614)292-6008. More information can also be obtained on a web site (http://www.ag/ohiostate.edu/~agsafety).

LIONEL TRAIN PARTS

10 A.M. SATURDAY, FEB. 28, 1998

RIDGE FIRE COMPANY

ALONG RT. 23, BETWEEN PHOENIXVILLE, PA. & RT. 100

IN THE BLUE ROOM: We are selling a varied collection which includes Hubley & Tootsietoys, Chein, Marx & Japanese toys of all kinds.

IN THE PAVILION: We are selling the parts inventory from Felsinger's Railroad Hobby Shop. What are we selling? Very tough question! It looks to us as if there are pre & post war Lionel parts in abundance; new, used & repro. The repair operation depended on salvage to some extent, so many incomplete locos & accessories are there. We see a couple hundred plastic parts cabinets having their little drawers filled with new parts carrying catalog numbers. Not many trains, really, except used modern era freight & passengers cars and a few locos. Plenty of transformers. The work area containing tools & equipment. Many steel shelves. Our process: we can't sort there, due to the fact that we simply can't walk there. We intend to start at the door and load our 14 foot, 5 ton super duty Ford to capacity for our first auction. Anything in our path gets loaded. After auction no. 1, maybe we can get organized. We will try not to sell any tools, manuals, catalogs or OB rolling stock in the first auction. All the stories you ever heard about this place are true! It's a miniature Madison Hardware situation.

A 10% BUYER'S PREMIUM WILL BE ADDED TO ALL PURCHASES.

It Wasn't Raining When Noah Built His Ark...

But I bet he was glad he built it when that big rain came. Plan ahead. Keep Vitamix on hand. You will be glad you did; the first time your cow or calf gets symptoms of a contagious disease or infection.

Use Vitamix For...

*Cows after calving.
*Every virus.
*Every infection.
*Every contagious disease.
*Mastitis & Scours.
*When your cow or calf is off feed.
*Vitamix is for every dairyman who wants to stay in business.
*Vitamix costs less than antibiotics.
*Vitamix is all natural.
*Vitamix is faster than antibiotics.
*Vitamix is free from side effects.
*Vitamix is for anything one animal can catch from another.

You can use Vitamix if you have already used antibiotics and sulfa drugs; but antibiotics and sulfa drugs damage the immune system and it takes longer for your cows and calves to recover if you used antibiotics first.

You can sell the milk when you use Vitamix.

Do you remember when you raised 100 calves without losing a calf? If you are too young to remember that, ask a dairyman over 50 years old. Remember when staff mastitis and a lot of the common diseases of today were practically unheard of? Ask a Dairyman over 50 years old. All that was before the routine use of antibiotics. Use of antibiotics is like a revolving door; treating for the symptoms of another treatment. Get off the medical merry go round. Keep some Vitamix on hand.

One gallon of Vitamix is typically enough for about 60 cases of calf scours and it costs only $60.00 (when you get it by the five gallon bucket).

One gallon of Vitamix is typically enough for about 8 cases of mastitis. ($7.50 per cow). You save five days milk when you use Vitamix instead of antibiotics. Save about $40.00 per each case!!!

Vitamix is made by the same people who make Formula M.

VITAMIX, when you need a miracle!!!.

IPM Award Winners Announced At Hort Show

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — A dedicated crop consultant and an innovative scientist were honored at the NYS Horticultural Society meeting on Jan. 22 for their achievements in integrated pest management (IPM).

Elizabeth Graeper Thomas, who owns Liz Thomas Orchard Consulting, and David Gadoury, senior research associate at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, received their awards from IPM Program director James Tette.

Half a dozen state IPM awards are presented each year to individuals or groups showing leadership in biological, cultural, physical, and chemical tools that minimizes economic, health, and environmental risks. According to Tette, the purpose of the award is to "honor people for developing new IPM methods or for sharing IPM with others."

Thomas, a crop consultant since 1982, works with commercial apple growers in Wayne County whose farms range from 15 to 600 acres. One of her greatest contributions to the field of IPM has been interpreting and putting to use the information provided by Cornell. Specifically, she has encouraged growers to manage apple scab by relying on rainfall data, rather than by applying calendar sprays. "We've fine-tuned the process," said Thomas. "I care about how much pesticide is out there."

Thomas also cares about growers' interests and is able to provide what she calls a "bird's-eye view" of what works and what doesn't. In previous years, by advocating a "soft program" that is less detrimental to beneficial organisms in the orchard and by pinpointing the timing of pesticide applications, Thomas was able to save her growers money. Today she thinks everyone has to work harder to ensure that new, softer pesticides are economically viable. Thomas advocates the use of predatory mites and sometimes sees growers shift perspective, changing their tolerance for damage, or becoming more willing to try biological control.

Sixteen years of experience has enabled Thomas to become well respected by growers and Cornell University staff and faculty. After earning a bachelor's from Cornell University in 1981, she was hired by Seneca Foods to be their pest management supervisor for fruit orchards. In later years, she teamed up with consultant Jeff Alicandro of AgrAssistance and still cooperates closely with him.

Thomas is on the board of directors of NEWA (the Northeast Weather Association).

The second winner to receive an IPM award is David M. Gadoury, senior research associate in the Department of Plant Pathology at Cornell University in Geneva, N.Y. Gadoury works on the biology and ecology of plant pathogens, and how this information can be used to better manage diseases of grapes and apples. He emphasizes practicality, simplicity, economy, and biologically based solutions.

Focusing on powdery grape mildew, Gadoury, together with the late R.C. Pearson, determined how the fungus survived winter to cause infection in the spring. They then revised the grape disease management program to target the early part of the growing season, when the disease is inconspicuous, but easier to control. This new approach reduced the annual number of fungicide applications by as much as 50 percent in some cases, and simultaneously improved disease control. As a direct result of these changes, New York grape growers save nearly $1 million a year in lower fungicide costs, and produce higher quality of fruit.

Gadoury's research is expanding our knowledge of how other major grape diseases, such as downy mildew and black rot, develop. New information about diseases developing in sequence as they weaken a plant is helping growers to select fungicides that target each disease at the proper time. Gadoury is also involved in controlling powdery mildew with beneficial mites.

In the field of apples, Gadoury worked on managing apple scab for some 20 years, developing the "Potential Ascospore Dose" principle and a simple heat-maturity model that likewise predicts the availability of inoculum. His work on both apples and grapes has been incorporated into disease management programs in New York, the northeast region, and other parts of the world.

Gadour earned both an M.S. and a Ph.D. in "Botany and Plant Pathology" at the University of New Hampshire.

Tobacco Meetings Set

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension has planned a series of tobacco production meetings in Lancaster County during the last two weeks of February.

The first series of meetings will deal with tobacco pest management from the seedbed to the shed. The meetings will include information on weed control, insect control, and disease control, especially blue mold.

Blue mold could become a major problem during the 1998 growing season. Last summer's weather offered the best control possible for the disease — dry weather — and the crop avoided a major disease outbreak. Strategies to prevent and treat blue mold will be discussed.

The tobacco mangement meetings are scheduled as follows:

- Feb. 16 starting at 1 p.m. in the Summit Valley Elementary School in New Holland.
- Feb. 17 starting at 7 p.m. in the Penn Manor High School Vocational Agriculture Classroom, Millersville.
- Feb. 18 starting at 1 p.m. in the Salisbury Township Municipal Building, White Horse.
- Feb. 19 starting at 1 p.m. in the Bart Township Fire Company, Georgetown.

These meetings will have category pesticide credits.

A second series of meetings will be held to discuss the growing of tobacco transplants using the "float system." Many of the southern growing regions are already using this system to produce more than 75 percent of their transplants. The system saves labor while producing excellent quality plants. Transplants grown this way start in the field with very little trouble. However, the system offers many unique management challenges.

Speaker for these meetings will be Dr. Dewitt Gooden, South Carolina state tobacco specialist. He has had many years experience with the system and is well known for his expertise.

Also on the program will be James Windson from the University of Delaware, Georgetown Research Facility. He will be discussing the experiences he has had using the float system to produce vegetable transplants.

The float culture meetings are scheduled as follows:

- Feb. 23 starting at 1 p.m. in the Leacock Township Building.
- Feb. 23 starting at 7 p.m. in the Penn Manor High School Vocational Agriculture Room, Millersville.
- Feb. 24 starting at noon in the Colerain Township Municipal Building, Kirkwood.

NYFB Disaster Relief Effort Nears $150,000

GLENMONT, N.Y. — The New York Farm Bureau Disaster Relief Fund has received nearly $150,000 since its creation on Jan. 13, 1998 in response to the early January ice storm that devastated a six-county region of the state's North Country.

In making the announcement, New York Farm Bureau President John Lincoln said that he was very pleased at "the tremendous public outpouring of generosity" that the NYFB Disaster Relief Fund has enjoyed so far. He said the effort to assist nearly 2,000 North Country farmers to recover from the devastating ice is ongoing.

"This was the worst ice storm to hit New York State in recorded history," Lincoln said. "When we came to understand the severity of the situation in Clinton, Essex, Franklin, St. Lawrence and Lewis counties, we knew we had to do something to help our farmer neighbors of the North Country."

The New York Farm Bureau Disaster Relief Fund was established as means with which to assist the North Country farm community, Lincoln said. "Every cent that we collect will go toward this relief effort," Lincoln explained. "It's important to note that it's not over for North Country farmers. They're still reeling from the severity of the storm, and they're still looking at the long-term impact."

The Farm Bureau President said that donations to the NYFB Disaster Relief Fund are still being accepted. He said checks or money orders written out to NYFB Disaster Relief Fund can be sent to: New York Farm Bureau Disaster Relief Fund, Route 9W, PO Box 992, Glenmont, NY 12077-0992. Credit card donations can be placed by calling (800) 342-4143.

"This has been a very difficult time for North Country residents, obviously," Lincoln said. "If there is a silver-lining here, it's that the rest of the state — indeed, the entire nation — has come through to support this region of our state. That certainly speaks volumes."

Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc.
Has A Good Selection Of Heavy Duty Spreaders In Stock

If You Want Fine Tune Top Dressing For Your Fields, You Need To See Binkley & Hurst Bros. Soon, Because Knight Will Do The Job!

KNIGHT Manufacturing Corp. Now Four Models From 1240 to 3080 Gallons

Retire Your Current Spreaders!

The 8000 Series ProTwin Slingers can handle a wider range of materials than any other spreader!

With the patented twin auger design, material circulates inside the unit This unique action helps keep the load level during normal operation as well as during start-up, fine spreading, and closed-door turns

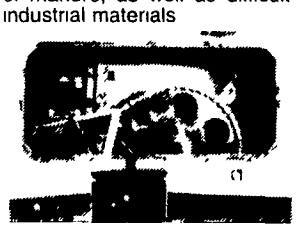
As a result of the twin auger system and the steep angle sides, material bridging and excess forward movement of material are virtually eliminated, even in pen packed and sticky feed lot material

Examine the material flow in the illustration and note that the left auger moves material forward to the discharge hammers The slightly raised right auger moves the material rearward while keeping the left auger evenly charged with material It is this patented circulating action that makes the ProTwin so effective in handling the toughest material encountered in most applications

Twin Auger Design History

The first ProTwin model, the Industrial 8030 unit, was introduced in the summer of 1993 The total acceptance of the ProTwin Slinger by agricultural and industrial operators in handling the toughest waste material has been phenomenal

Originally, the 8030 ProTwin was targeted for industrial use Today, the same design has been adapted to smaller models to meet the material handling needs of most applications All of these models handle a wide range of materials, from tough pen pack and sticky feed lot material to slurry types of manure, as well as difficult industrial materials



Front Drive Compartment*

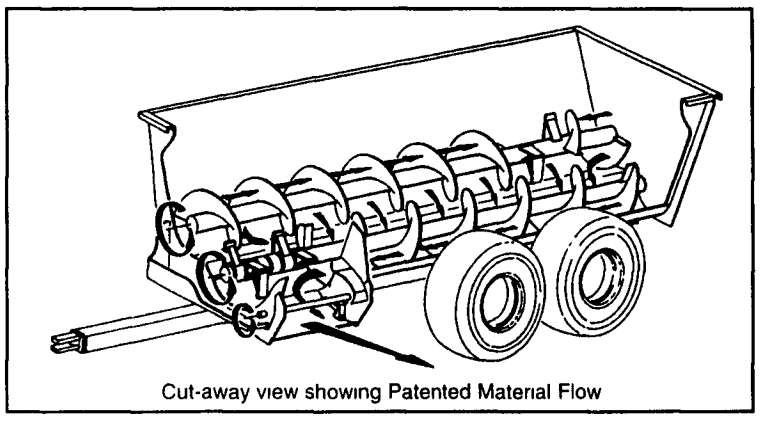
Simple Massive Reduction Drive

Each of the ProTwin models is designed for maximum, high torque output The fully sealed front oil bath enclosure helps assure that chains and sprockets remain clean and well lubricated The auger and expeller shafts are sealed to help eliminate oil contamination Polyethylene-type spring loaded chain tighteners are used on all driveline chains for positive alignment and long life Bearings can easily be greased through the external grease banks without removing the front drive shield Splined shafts have been used in all high-torque areas to provide added strength and reliability

PTO Driveline

Constant Velocity PTO with Overload Clutch

Both 540 and 1000 RPM drivelines incorporate a constant velocity joint to provide a smooth transfer of power from the tractor to the unit This relieves uneven stress on the drive- train during normal turns and during operation over uneven terrain The overload clutch provides protection for the expeller shaft and initial drive components (There is no shear pin in the expeller drive)



Cut-away view showing Patented Material Flow

Forged-Steel Hammer

Each hammer has a nylon bushing and a replaceable manganese steel wear plate.

The One Spreader That Will Do The Work of 2. Pen Packed or Slurry is not a Problem. Give Us A Call.

Hear What Your Neighbors Have to Say!

"Being poultry farmers, we need a spreader that spreads evenly and thin. We also want a spreader that spreads fast. Our Knight 8030 ProTwin Slinger does this. No spreader we have had has ever spread as wide and as even as these spreaders. The 8030 pull spreader works so well, we also purchased a truck mounted 8030."

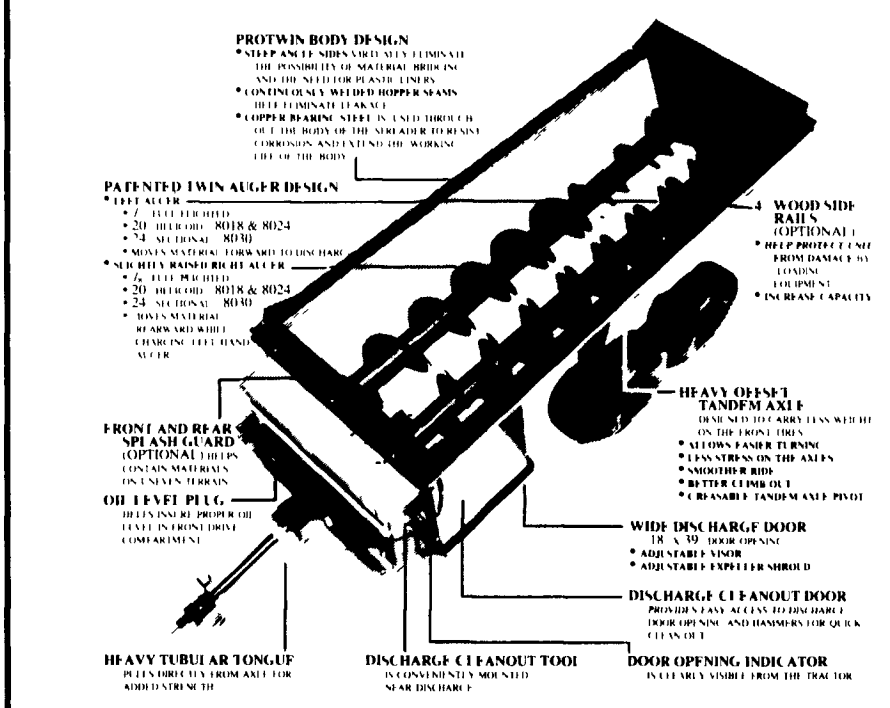
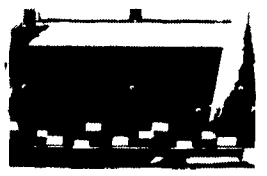
Harold Rohrer – Lancaster, PA





Hammer Discharge

Patented Free Swinging Hammer Expeller

The expeller on all ProTwin models features 15 forged steel hammers mounted on a 2-1/2" shaft The hammers pivot on 5/8" bolts with nylon anti-seize type bushings that allow free movement The expeller rotates at over 800 RPM allowing each eight pound hammer to swing down into the material, peeling it off and slinging it under hand in a fine spread pattern with no clumps The 3" wide, free swinging hammers absorb shock and tolerate most foreign objects Each hammer is faced with a work-hardening manganese steel wear plate for longer life and low cost replacement. The adjustable shroud allows easy hammer clearance setting for optimum spread pattern width This proven hammer expeller design enables finespreading control and material calibration through the combination of the hydraulic door opening and ground speed

Rear Drive Compartment*

The right auger is driven at the rear and is shear pin protected Bearings, chains and sprockets are easily accessible for routine maintenance

Shields removed for illustration only Do not operatie without shields in place and functioning*

Accurate Seed Placement Is What We Do Best!

Simple Design - Low Maintenance - Quality Built

Large Two-Bushel Seed Hopper for extended planting between fill-ups Slide on seed hopper lids for convenient access to the hopper

Unmatched Seed Spacing Accuracy results from White's edge drop seed disc design, which virtually eliminates seed delay as the seed leaves the seed cell and then "free falls" just 18 inches to the seed trench

High Rate, State-Of-The-Art Seed Sensors monitor row unit functions and assure you are getting the seed population you select

Seed Tube Clip: Positively centers the seed drop tube between the opener discs Improves seed spacing and depth control as well as extending the life of the seed drop tube

Short, 18-Inch Seed Drop Tube is curved to compensate for the forward travel of the planter to gently place the seed into the soil This short drop also enhances accurate seed spacing and minimizes tough ricocheting and handling

Low Pressure, Positive Air Metering System gently singulates seeds, protecting the fragile coat and assuring uniform plant spacings This technology also eliminates the haphazard spewing of soybean seeds from mechanical seed metering mechanisms found in a grain drill

Depth Control Adjustment: Planting depth is easily set with the use of the depth control knob Each one half turn changes the depth of seed placement by 1/8 inch Reference rings indicate each inch of seed depth

Closing Wheel Adjustment Cam permits the closing wheels to be adjusted to each wheel tracks an equal distance from the center line of the seed trench Soil is firmed uniformly around the seed for superior moisture retention

Angled Closing Wheels gently firm soil around the seed The Staggered Closing Wheel position reduces plugging in heavy residue improves seed trench closing in no-till and reduces seed trench sidewall compaction

Walking Beam Gauge Wheels maintain 50% of the weight on each wheel Seed depth is controlled in rough ground by equalizing planting depth at all times

KRAUSE CONSERVATION TILLAGE

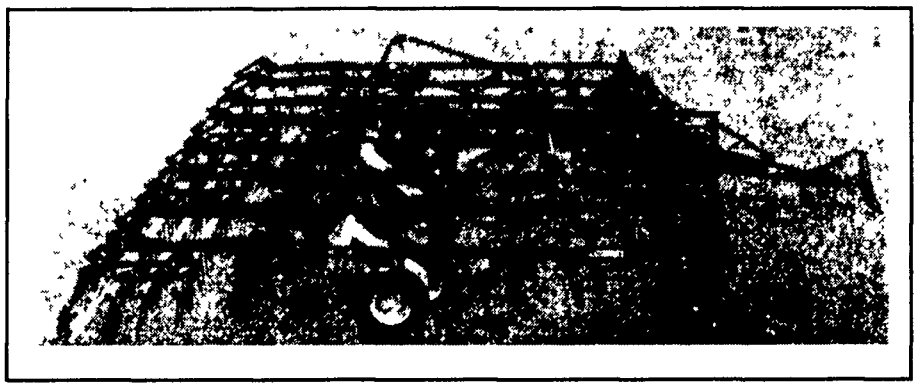
FINISH TILLAGE SYSTEMS

ONE PASS Tillage is REALITY

6150 XT LANDSMAN

Combines Primary & Secondary Tillage with Seedbed Finishing

6300 LANDSTAR



Heavy Residue does not stop this Machine

Both Machines feature Krause's "2-Piece K-tine" - 180 pound point load - and/or the XT270 Shank - 270 pound point load - in combinations that till, and level the soil so that you are ready to plant after one pass. The LANDSTAR is designed to handle heavy crop residue without disking or shredding first. The trash moves on through. The secret to the finished seedbed is on the back - combination of rolling baskets and heavy-duty 16" spring tines level the ground and incorporate any trash that's present.

High-Residue FIELD CULTIVATORS

KRAUSE invented HEAVY-DUTY

2-Piece K-Tine provide superior 25" clearance for trash flow.

Self-leveling tongue automatically levels the unit when changing depth.

5 Rows of Shanks - 125" front to back.

The 4200HR Field Cultivator is the Conservation Leader

CFTC Adviser Encourages Growers To Think Strategically

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. – Wide price swings prevailed in the grain markets in 1997, and analysts predict the trend will continue in 1998. But at the National Farmers Organization (NFO) National Convention, hundreds of American grain producers heard about innovative ways to manage market volatility and profit into the future.

"The major grain markets – corn, soybeans, and wheat – all presented producers with special marketing challenges in the past year," said Richard Ellinghuysen, director of program development for NFO. "However, the markets also presented a number of good pricing opportunities, and producers need to understand how to capitalize on those prices when they arise next year."

On Commodity Education Day, producers learned about a newly enhanced grain marketing program that will provide producers with profit opportunities throughout 1998 and beyond. With the New Marketing Plus as part of strategic marketing plans on America's grain farms, producers can take advantage of a proven method for success. "Producers are continually striving to improve their grain marketing strategies, and that is critical in the ever-changing market environment," Ellinghuysen emphasized.

Selling grain during times traditional characterized by higher prices, the New Marketing Plus succeeds at marketing into price upswings That can put grain prices producers receive in the top one-third of the market range.

Also A Commodity Futures Trading Commission adviser, Ellinghuysen understands the many issues surrounding the grain trade in the last year, from concerns over Chicago Board of Trade delivery points to off-exchange traded ag options "I believe producers are operating in a market filled with challenges and opportunities," he said "They can succeed using a number of techniques "

Managing Worms In Grazing Dairy Cattle

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — This coming spring, Pennsylvania dairy farmer Larry Lohr will treat his cows just once with a wormer. That should hold them until the end of the grazing season, when he brings them back in from pasture, says Agricultural Research Service parasitologist Lou Gasbarre. Then, Gasbarre recommends one more treatment . . . just for safe measure.

Even with the extra treatment, it will be three fewer than Lohr gave his cows in 1996 to battle the brown stomach worm — Ostertagia ostertagi.

This roundworm makes its home in the stomachs of dairy and beef cattle in temperate regions worldwide. Osteragia accounts for 80 to 90 percent of the worm problem in U.S. beef and dairy cattle, costing the industry more than $2 billion annually. The most common estimates put producer costs at about $20 per animal per year, says Gasbarre, who is with ARS' Immunology and Disease Resistance Laboratory in Beltsville, Maryland.

Thanks to Gasbarre's recommendation to take a prophylactic approach to the worm, Lohr's cows kept a 3-pounds-per-day increase in milk production last summer — that's 6 percent more milk — compared to the same months in 1995 and 1996. And they had "significantly higher body weights," says Lohr.

Those increases in milk production and body weight also had an environmental benefit. Nitrogen that went into the increased animal production wasn't excreted in urine onto the pasture, where a large portion of it would have been susceptible to leaching into the groundwater.

Lohr is among the first of a growing breed of dairy producers trying to increase their net income by letting cows feed themselves during the growing season rather than cut, dry, and store the feed and then serve it to them later. Since he began pasturing his cows 12 years ago, Lohr says he has had "real good success. My annual feed costs dropped about $150 per cow." And it has increased efficiency so much he has been able to increase his herd from 45 to 100 cows.

When Lohr set up the intensive rotational grazing system, no one advised him how to keep the brown stomach worm from nibbling into his profits. Although he routinely treated his cows with a wormer during the grazing season, milk production increased after the treatments but then dropped again, he says.

Lohr suspected that worms might be causing this roller coaster effect. He mentioned the problem at a meeting at the Pennsylvania State University Center for Grazing Research and Education, where he represents dairy producers. Fellow center member, ARS soil scientist Bill Stout, contacted Gasbarre about the problem.

Together, the two scientists applied for and received a grant from the Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education Program, known as SARE, for a 3-year study of Lohr's farm. Funded by USDA to encourage low-input production, SARE is administered by the University of Vermont for projects in the Northeast.

During the 1995 and 1996 grazing seasons, Gasbarre observed Lohr's operation. He also mixed worm-free calves raised at the Beltsville center in with Lohr's cows in order to measure infection rates. Lohr has 19 fenced, 1½ -acre paddocks on which he rotates the cows daily.

With this scheme, the animals eat the grass when it's most nutritious. But it also fits into the worm's life cycle perfectly for keeping infectious larvae at high levels, says Gasbarre.

"The eggs take 10 to 14 days to be come infections after they are passed in the feces. Normally, cows avoid grazing near feces, where the parasites are heaviest. But in heavily grazed paddocks, like this farm, cows eat everything," he says. "There are no tufts left."

With a 19-day rotation, the cows were grazing each paddock shortly after the eggs that had been deposited in the previous rotation developed into infectious larvae. The animals kept becoming reinfected until the worms built up to a critical level — dropping milk production and animal weights. Gasbarre says some scientists and veterinarians are not convinced that worms reduce milk production, animal weight, or reproduction in females. They think cattle have enough immunity to suppress infection.

But the evidence from Lohr's farm belies that notion.

Gasbarre recommended that Lohr treat his cows in the spring right after they had made their first rotation through all 19 paddocks. That way, any larvae that survived the winter would be picked up and killed. "The cows act as big vacuum cleaners," he says.

"They don't pass eggs for 17 to 20 days after they've been infected. By treating them after 19 days in contaminated paddocks, it kills off the worms before the eggs can pass out and recontaminate."

And the theory worked, judging by the worm-free calves that Gasbarre mixed in with Lohr's herd throughout the study.

Before treatment, the calves passed the same number of eggs as in the previous year. By the end of August, only about 10 percent of the calves had any eggs in their feces at all. And these had only one or two, says Gasbarre.

"Instead of a roller coaster effect," says Lohr, "We've evened out our milk production."

In 1995, Lohr wormed this cows five times. Last year, under the prophylactic approach, he wormed them three times. This year, it will drop to two treatments — one in the spring, after the first 19-day rotation, and another at the end of the grazing season.

Lohr will have to continue treating his cows each spring to retard larvae build-up, Gasbarre says. But pasture levels are so low now that the second treatment is just for insurance."It's more expensive to clean up the problem than to prevent it.

"We don't want the animals to never see a parasite," he adds. "They need to build up some exposure to stimulate their immune systems. But you want to keep the exposure below a level where the parasites overwhelm the immune system."

Gasbarre emphasizes the importance of considering health issues when setting up animal management programs.

"Lohr would not have gotten to this point if he had been advised to manage his pastures for parasites — using prophylaxis," he says.

He recommends that producers treat their animals once, then watch the weather and give follow-up treatments accordingly.

"The larvae thrive in cool, wet weather. A prolonged dry spell will slow them down, especially combined with hot weather," says Gasbarre.

As part of the funding for this study, the Northeast SARE review committee wnated to know how many other producers in the region felt they had a worm problem and what management practices might be contributing to it. Stout and Gasbarre developed a questionnaire that was sent to 2,000 livestock producers — from Maine to Maryland.

Nearly 800 responded, and the researchers are still analyzing the data. Preliminary indications are that 40 percent of the respondents didn't know if worms were a problem on their farm. One-third reported worms to be a moderate problem, while a little more than one-quarter didn't think they had a worm problem. Lohr is now among those without a problem.

"It proves the system will work if done properly," he says. "If farmers have a problem, they should go after an answer." — by Judy Mcbride, ARS.

McPhersons Cultivate A-Maize-Ing Entertainment

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

NEW PARK (York Co.) — Don't cut through the corn. Don't pull off any ears. No running. No cigarettes!

Got those rules? Then you're ready to take on the challenge of Maize Quest.

After an introductory initiation to the fine art of safely negotiating their way through a corn field, including a pointed warning about how cigarettes can start fires in a dry field, several thousand people did just that last fall at the McPherson family's Maple Lawn Farms, New Park. The southern York County corn maze was one of several such consumer-entertainment outreaches that have been cultivated around the region in the last few years.

Corn rustled as a brisk, fall breeze stirred through the drying stand of upside-down ears and drooping, brown stalks.

A cricket dashed across a packed path, seeking a haven from a pounding by passing sneakers.

And a gleeful cluster of chattering church-group members gathered to add yet another section to their map of the intricate corn maze. If they could complete the map, it would show them the way out.

Maize Quest was truly a family endeavor of the Paul and Gail McPherson clan, longtime advocates of educating the consuming public about where food originates. From their U-pick orchard to periodic newsletters sent to a wide mailing list of customers, the McPherson's Maple Lawn fruit and grain operation has always been on the leading edge of agriculture-education activism.

Sharing in the major planning and implementation of Maize Quest, with its heavy emphasis on information along with entertainment, were siblings Hugh and Gretchen McPherson Hugh, a recent Penn State graduate with an ag business degree, combined his interest in undertaking a new farm venture with the art degree of his sister, Gretchen, who lives in California.

Their brainstorming birthed the Maize Quest idea months before the first corn seed went into the soil. Hugh had heard about other mazes in the area and saw it as an extension and alternative use of the farm's normal planting of a large acreage of grain corn. They envisioned a corn maze that would not only entertain visitors, but

New PMCGA President Wants Vote On Corn Checkoff

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

SHELOCTA (Indiana Co.) — Chris Kimmel is steadfast about his plans.

The new president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) intends, within the next two years, to put a referendum before the state corn growers.

That referendum will address the question: will Pennsylvania have a corn checkoff?

Already, the PMCGA knows the direction it must take. At the Crops Conference in Grantville early this year, corn growers [illegible] heavily in crops, including about 800 in corn. The passing of a checkoff, calculated at point of sale and based on a similar program in Maryland, would mean a lot to the commercial growers who want to see better promotion of the product, in addition to money for research at land-grant universities. (Those same universities are already experiencing the withdrawal of government money — those dollars have to come from somewhere.)

Cooperative Milling Expands Feed Plant

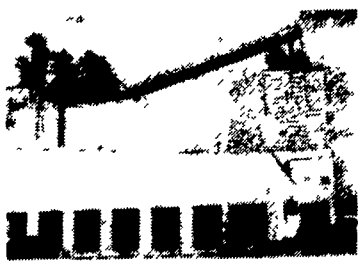
GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — One of the most diversified feed manufacturing plants on the East Coast is nearing completion in Gettysburg. The facility, which is expected to be finished by mid-1998, is owned by Cooperative Milling, Inc., a joint venture between Agway and Southern States.

"The farmer customers of Agway and Southern States require individually tailored products formulated precisely to meet their animal feeding needs," said Jeff Best, general manager, Cooperative Milling. "We have made significant investments in new equipment, technology and infrastructure designed to enable us to provide our owner's customers with the animal feed products they need."

Among the new investments made during the expansion of the Gettysburg plant were:

• A bulk loadout facility with 36 finished feed bins, pellet screening, liquid blending, and direct loadout capabilities.

• A computerized batching and routing system, along with a new mixer and scale, which will increase capacity by more than 33 percent over the previous system.



Final construction phases of the warehouse and bulk loadout expansion at Cooperative Milling in Gettysburg near completion.

• An automated bagged feed packaging line dedicated to packaging equine feeds. This equipment includes a new mixing system, molasses addition system and packaging, all of which is computer controlled.

• 23,000 square feet of additional warehouse space.

In addition, another pelleting line is being added to substantially increase pelleting capacity and a separate bulk scale will be added for all incoming raw materials.

Sire Power Honors Sales Personnel

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — At several regional sales award meetings held recently throughout the United States, Sire Power honored its top sales people and national district sales managers.

Top honorees at this year's award ceremonies were Earl Kepner of Belleville, who earned the Sire Power membership area's Direct Herd Representative of the Year. In the national market place, the District Sales Manager (DSM) of the Year Award was earned by Darrin VanOrsdale of Jasper, N.Y. Kepner and VanOrsdale were cited for their outstanding contributions to Sire Power, assessing their sales, program usage, and management.

Ranking second out of the 46 national district sales managers is Chuck Blair of Alburg, Vt., who manages Northern New York and Northern Vermont. This was the seventh consecutive year that Blair has been ranked in the top seven of this yearly contest. Third place went to the western Pennsylvania area, managed by Russ Jacques of Cochranton. This was the sixth consecutive year that Jacques has been ranked in the top 10.

Rounding out the top 10 DSMs for 1997 were Mike Pachta, eastern Kansas/southeast Nebraska; Lynn Harbaugh, east central Wisconsin; Mark Devitt, western Ohio; Greg Kilmer, southern New England, Hudson Velley, N.Y.; Mike Lee, western Michigan; and Keith McCauley of central New York.

Bradley B. Fest, new district manager.

New District Manager Named

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Keystone Division of Purina Feeds this week announced that Bradley B. Fest has been named the new district sales manager. Fest started in his new position Monday.

Fest has been associated with Purina since he graduated from the Univestiy of Wisconson, Madison, in 1985. With a degree in Ag Economics, Fest served in Purina sales in southeast Wisconson for 11 years. Then in May of 1997, he was named assistant sales manager in Statesville, North Carolina. Now he has been promoted to district sales manager in Pennsylvania, working out of the Camp Hill office and mill.

"I believe in the value-added principle for products," Fest said. "In today's ag environment, if you want extra customers, you need to add value in the form of extra service. We try to help the farmer make more money. Often the farmer can't do much about the prices he receives for products, but I firmly believe there are ways to generate more revenue for the dairymen. This can be done by taking a look at the opeation and helping with financial decisions that focus on what part of the operation is profitable.

"In our business, we need to earn the right for every order, every month, every week. We can't say enough about how much we appreciate the business our customers give us. And we want the opportunity to prove we have our customer's interest at heart. We have specific veterinarians and full lab support on staff. This service is at no charge to the customer.

In addition, no other feed company does as much research as Purina. And we have experts on staff for about every kind of decision a farmer must make. Many businesses the size of farming operations would have a board of directors, people who could be called upon to help make some of the business decisions.

"We would like to be on the farmer's board of directors, a partner in their business. Farmers may be suprised with what all we can help them. If a farmer needs something that seems unorthodox to ask from a feed company, we hope he will ask us anyway. He may be suprised at what we are able to do."

Fest and his wife Jackie have two children, Christopher 6, and Madelin, 11 months. They have bought a house in Mechanicsburg and will be moving to Pennsylvania the begining of April.

Alderfer Auction Company Receives Awards

HATFIELD (Montgomery Co.) — The Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association (PAA) has recognized the Alderfer Auction Company with six advertising excellence awards at its 1998 Auctioneers Convention held recently in Harrisburg.

Five first place awards were given to Alderfer's in the real estate brochure category, newspaper display category, specialty cataloged brochure categoy, farm auction brochure category, and 60-second radio advertisement. A second place award was received in the black and white brochure category. PAA members from across the state sent in their advertising pieces to be judged by a panel of marketing professionals.

"Sanford A. Alderfer built this company with a sense of integrity and a touch of class," said Advertising Manager Steve Leinbach. "When we work with our clients that same integrity and class not only comes in the selling of their property but also in the advertising and promotion of their property. We want to give them the best in advertising and marketing."

Detachers Feature Full-Flow Sensing

MADISON, Wis. — Just announced from Bou-Matic, a company of DEC International, Inc., headquartered here, is the next generation in non-metered electronic detachers — the Signature 4000 Series detachers.

Each model in the Signature 4000 Series line of detachers features full-flow sensing and non-restrictive shut-off that reduces vacuum fluctuation and vacuum droop, so cows are milked faster and more gently.

"These stainless steel detachers offer the dairy producer the greatest flexibility in choosing a detacher," said Ron Curran, product manager for Bou-Matic. "From the economical model 4200D, to the hi-tech model 4600D, there is a Bou-Matic Signature 4000 Series detacher to please any dairy producer.

"These detachers have adjustable let down, detach and milk sweep delays so you can customize your herd's milkout," noted Curran. "These models are also manufactured from stainless steel to provide durability."

A compressed air supply is not required for operation and the pulsation line may be used as the vacuum supply for the Signature 4200D and 4400D model detachers.

According to Product Engineer Ron Pulvermacher, "The Signature 4200D model detacher has a full-flow curb mounted sensor that can be adjusted to meet a dairy producer's detach preference. The milk shut-off can be plumbed with hoses up to 100 feet in length to free up the operator area from drop hoses."

The Signature 4400D model detacher is a rope detacher with full-flow sensing, vacuum operated retraction and vacuum shut-off. "This allows for both manual and automatic operation," said Curran.

Nutrient management is everyone's responsibility

The Pennsylvania Nutrient Act, enacted in October 1997, has recently been the focus of many seminars and training meetings. This legislation mandates that any farm calculated to be a Concentrated Animal Operation will be required to file a "Nutrient Management Plan" with a local Soil Conservation Agency by October 1, 1998.

The law defines a concentrated animal unit as any farm with greater than 2.00 animal units per acre These operations will need to either seek training to file a nutrient management plan or hire a nutrient management consultant to assist in filing it

The intent of this law is not to penalize Pennsylvania agriculture or to hinder the state in attracting new agricultural industries, but rather to encourage producers to be proactive in responsible nutrient management, thus being good neighbors to our growing agricultural/urban community in the area of water quality

Nutrient management is not only cost effective in recycling nutrient byproducts of animal production in crop production, but is in the best interest of animals and humans alike to have a clean, uncontaminated water supply.

One reason that so much attention has recently been focused on the poultry industry is that fewer than a dozen CEOs control 80% of the broiler production in the United States Also at issue are the growth and concentration of these poultry facilities, since most try to locate growers in close proximity to feed mills and processing plants

Because it can be economically transported over a greater distance to other agricultural areas in need of fertilizer nutrients, the relatively dry form of poultry litter minimizes the nutrient management problem for the poultry industry. At a recent National Poultry Waste Management Symposium, one report indicated that manure could be economically transported over 100 miles to areas that could utilize the manure as fertilizer, compost, or as a ruminant feed supplement.

Increasing hazzards such fish kills due to improper storage or management of litter and the constant leaching of nutrients into the water system indicate that the time has come to balance nitrogen output with crop production and protect water resources. Although not yet mandated by law, many farmers have already recognized the advantages of nutrient management and voluntarily submitted nutrient management plans on their operations

These are forward-thinking individuals who recognize the responsibility they have as stewards of the earth's resources. They also enjoy the legal liability advantages and risk reduction by complying with recognized best management practices in regard to clean water and the nutrient management act.

Following is sample calculation that has been based on what would be considered a Concentrated Animal Operation One animal unit is equal to 1000 lb average weight on a yearly basis. Therefore, if a farmer kept a 2000 lb cow on two acres for one year, the average weight would be calculated as 1000 lb per acre for one year, or one animal unit per acre per year. Poultry is a little more difficult to calculate

For a house that produces 5 lb birds and has around five flocks per year with 30,000 birds/house and 285 days of production per year, the calculation would look like this:

[(5 lb/2) x 30,000 x (285/365 days) = 58,562 lb produced per year – 1000 lb/animal unit = 58.6 animal units from the house per year Therefore, if the farm has fewer than 34 3 acres for these 58.6 animal units, then it is considered a concentrated animal unit, and a Nutrient Management Plan must be filed by October 1, 1998

Let us all be proactive in protecting and sustaining resources that we enjoy and that give us our livelihood Find out what is the best plan of action for your farming operation and submit a nutrient management plan to your local soil conservation agency. Be part of the effort to shape the law for the survivability of farm life as well as the preservation of our most valuable life-sustaining resource—our water
